

NANCY GETS AWARD

Nancy Reagan will receive the 1981 Scopus Award of the Western States Region of the American Friends of the Hebrew University. It was announced jointly in Jerusalem and in Los Angeles by Avraham Harman, president of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and Milton A. Rudin, president of the region. Harman, former Israeli Ambassador to the United States, will confer the award, highest honor the Friends can bestow at the 12th annual Scopus Award Gala on Sunday evening, November 15th, at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

The evening with the First Lady will also mark the creation of the Nancy Reagan Scholarships at the Hebrew university. The students to be designated as Nancy Reagan Scholars will be Jewish, Christian, Moslem and Druze young men and women. The scholarships will reflect the academic freedom that is the hallmark of the Hebrew University, world's largest Jewish institution of higher education.

"It is our hope," said Rudin, "that 100 Nancy Reagan Scholars will be studying on one of the four campuses of the university during the next three years. Each scholarship will enable the student to earn a bachelors degree."

Mrs. Reagan joins a distinguished roster of men and women when she accepts the Scopus Award which bears the name of Mount Scopus, the historic Hill of the Watchmen overlooking the City of Jerusalem. It is here that the Hebrew University of Jerusalem was created in 1918. First classes were held in 1925. Previous Scopus

Laureates include Artur Rubinstein, Frank Sinatra, Gerald R. Ford, John Wayne, Dinah Shore, Gregory

Peck, Harvey L. Silbert, Zubin Mehta and Mehli Mehta, and Betty Ford.
