

QUEST FOR RELIGIOUS MEANING

"American Jewry has yet to write a new chapter of vitality, hope and responsiveness in the history of the Jewish people," said two leaders of the United Synagogue of America in a New Year's message, and they added, "there is a growing quest for religious meaning on the part of a new generation of American Jews."

Simon Schwartz, president of the United Synagogue of America and Rabbi Benjamin Z. Kreitman, executive vice president, pointed out that is why the United Synagogue has taken as its slogan for this year the verse from Psalm 24:6: "This is the generation that seeks 'him.'"

"This verse points up the growing quest for religious meaning on the part of the new generation of American Jews. Young and old are yearning to elevate their lives from the mundane and the ordinary. There is a need to transform this aspiration for something real, permanent and everlasting; a message and hope for tomorrow. The synagogue is the only institution of the Jewish people which has the capacity to bring this generation of 'seekers' back to God.

"The other pivot of our religious loyalties is the land and State of Israel. Through Israel our identity as a sacred people is given strength and permanence."

The two leaders expressed the prayer that "the coming year 5742 will mark a resurgence in the loyalty to the synagogue and in support of the State of Israel and the people of Israel. It is their hope which is joined in by their fellow leaders in the United Synagogue movement that through our prayers and achievements peace will come to the community of Israel and then spread to the entire family of man."
