NEW YORK (WNS) -- The National Conference on Soviet Jewry has learned that the appeal of POC Aleksandr Paritsky, heard in a Kharkov court was rejected by presiding officials. Paritsky was sentenced to three years in a labor camp following the November, 1981 trial for allegedly "defaming the Soviet State." His wife, Polina, was not permitted at the hearing.

TEL AVIV (WNS) -- Members of Anatoly Shcharansky's family were allowed to see the Jewish Prisoner of Conscience for the first time in 18 months, his brother Leonid told Anatoly's wife Avital by phone from Moscow Jan. 7. Leonid said that his brother's physical condition had worsened and that the KGB was trying to break him. Their objective he said, was to try to get Anatoly to confess that he was really an American spy, the charge on which he was found guilty by a Soviet court and sentenced to 13 years in prison and labor camps. He has recently been transferred to the notorious Christopol Prison, 500 miles east of Moscow, where conditions are more severe than in the labor camps.
