Dear Editor,
 As founder of "The Way Out" - a newsletter for ex-way followers, I applaud the ADL Research Report on "The Way International." It the most accurate report I've ever seen, and highly suggest all faiths to read it.
 During my seven year enslavement in The Way, I was drilled with Wierville's anti-Semitism. I believed the Holocaust didn't occur, and modern day Jews were from Khazar, not Palestine. Wierville, a protege of Hitler and Stalin; not only attacks the Jewish nation but most recently the Catholics. Basically, he is against anything outside "his little kingdom."

 Ironically, the same people I once attacked; now provide counseling for my wife and me to help us return to normal lives. Similar programs like "Operation Concern" here in Kansas City are run throughout the nation by Jewish Family and Children Services. Please print this letter in order for me to express my thankfulness for the ADL Report; "Operation Concern" and the "giving attitude" I've noticed. For parents with children still in cults I'd like to say, "I got out on my own and there is much hope for your child."

Dear Don,
 You're to be applauded for the beautiful and deserved tribute to your father.
 Good luck to Jackie and her family.
 Best regards,

JEW TARGETED IN AUSTRIA BOMBINGS

VIENNA (WNS) -- A series of bombings aimed at Jewish personalities, one of them the visiting Satmar Rebbe, and shops owned by Austrian Jews has been planned and implemented by neo-Nazis, Austrian authorities indicated here.
 Two men, one a wanted West German rightwing terrorist, have been apprehended but neither has made any confession so far. Police say the evidence against them seems firm.
 The bombings started last winter, when an explosive device was deposited in front of the Vienna apartment of Chief Rabbi Akiba Eisenberg. He and his wife were not home when the device detonated. Only the apartment door was damaged. In mid-June, a similar bomb attack was made on the home of Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Nazi Documentation Center in Vienna. Wiesenthal and his wife were home at the time but neither was hurt in the blast.

 Two weeks later, a bomb detonated at the apartment of Alexander Giese, a television journalist, but no one was hurt. In early July, a bomb exploded in Salzburg in front of a clothing shop owned by an Austrian Jew. A few days later, another bomb went off in front of another shop in Vienna of the same company. In Salzburg, the bombers left leaflets at the store which said, "Do not buy in Jewish stores."

 Recently a memorial for victims of the Holocaust in Vienna was desecrated with swastikas. A Jewish-owned bank in Vienna was hit by a Molotov cocktail. Recently, a bomb which failed to go off when its trigger mechanism malfunctioned was found in a Vienna park. An explosives expert in the Viennese police department said the failed bomb was by far the most powerful in the series. Police suspect all the bombs were made by the same individual or group.

What police called a "comedy of crime" got considerable attention in Austrian media. Norbert Burger, leader of the rightwing National Democratic Party (NDP), called a press conference to announce he would make known the identity of one of the wanted terrorists. The police immediately took Burger into custody for interrogation. A few hours later, Ekkehard Weil, 33, wanted in West Germany as a neo-Nazi, was arrested.

The threat against the Satmar Rebbe, Moshe Teitelbaum, was made known to Austrian authorities. Teitelbaum had been vacationing in the Austrian mountains. Police responded by tightening security measures at Semmering, Teitelbaum's vacation place. The Satmar Rebbe left for his home in Brooklyn.

With one exception, which was not disclosed, the names of the intended victims of the bomb plantings were contained in a hit list circulated in West German neo-Nazi circles. The list was leaked to an Austrian newspaper earlier this year.
