No car newer than this 1936 Lincoln Zephyr will be entered in the Imperial Palace's First Annual Antique Auto Run Nobember 20th. The 58 mile route of the run will go through Red Rock Canyon, past Spring Mountain Ranch State Park (where this Lincoln was photographed), to Bonnie Springs/Old Nevada, and return to the Imperial Palace.

Ideal time to see the cars will be 8:00 a.m. (Saturday, November 20th) when the oldest cars start up the Strip from the Imperial Palace toward Charleston Boulevard. They will proceed West on Charleston followed later in the morning by cars built during 1905-15, 1916-27, 1928-31 and lastly by cars built from the years 1932 to 1936.

The caravan will stop at Bonnie Springs/Old Nevada for lunch, then continue through Blue Diamond, back across the old Los Angeles Highway and finishing at the entrance to the Imperial Palace.

In its determination to root out white collar crime, the FBI is reported to be drawing on the skills of 20,000 of its employees. Under the sober leadership of its new man from Missouri, former Federal Judge William Webster, the agency has scored an impressive string of successes against hijackers, mobsters and swindlers.

Along the way it has not hesitated to use plea bargainers with sordid records. This procedure has been conspicuous in the employment of Mel Weinberger. The FBI dropped charges against him for trying to take Singer Wayne Newton and others for $200,000 when Weinberger agreed to enact the role of the heavy in the Abscam drama.

Weinberger gladly helped the government men draw into a trap a half dozen members of the House of Representatives and Senator Harrison Williams (D. N.J.). The trappers were agents posing as Arab Sheiks with the romantic names of Kambir Abdul Rahman and Yasser Habib

The Abscam (shorthand for "Arab Scam") roundup moved into court and resulted in convictions for several lawmakers who were willing to use the prestige of their high offices in exchange for payments from crime busters posing as Arabs loaded with oil money.

Stung by this dishonor and shaken also by public reports, later disproved, of sexual traffic between pages and legislators, the House Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights and the Senate Select Committee Evaluating Undercover Investigations wrestled throughout the summer with the grave problems created by this chain of events.

These moral and political issues are serious indeed. They not only stir new debates over entrapment but impel some critics of the Justice Department to suggest that the executive branch of government is trying to undermine the prestige of a second branch, i.e. Congress. As a side issue, some may wonder whether potentates of Saudi Arabis might take umbrage at the FBI's decision to use Arab impersonators in a copsand-robbers scenario. Remember how upset Prince Abdullah was when "The Death of A Princess" was piped into our homes via public television?

One definition holds that "entrapment" amounts to the inducement or encouragement of an individual to engage in illegal activity in which he would otherwise not be disposed to engage. The naive among us might expect protection against the use of this technique. Congressmen, on the other hand, ought to know what's expected of them. Senator Larry Pressler, (R., S. DAKOTA) and three Democratic Congressmen from New Jersey -- James J. Florio, James J. Howard and William J. Hughes -- emerged as heroes of a sort from the Abscam operations because they did bite on the FBI bait.

Federal Judge John P. Fullam objected to what struck him as entrapment. Representative Don Edwards (D., Calif.), a former FBI agent, and Chairman of the House Committee, picking up the pieces after Abscam, has also expressed negative views about this kind of head hunting. Over in the Senate, Alan K. Simpson (R., Wyoming) accused the FBI men of "growing giddy with success;" and Senator Daniel K. Inouye (D., Hawaii) said he hoped his phone wouldn't be tapped.

In rebuttal, the FBI points out that the method now used enabled the agency to recover valuable stolen art. It was not purloined property they were after. The net widened, and congressmen fell into it. The FBI had on its side of the debate Federal Judge George Pratt. He handled a number of the Abscam trials and ruled FBI methods as legal and constitutional.

Nevertheless, doubts linger. Random audits by the Internal Revenue Service hunting tax dodgers is one thing. But worried about leaks to the press in the Abscam venture and determined to uphold the American tradition of due process, the Senate Select Committee frowns upon this FBI process as "ethically repugnant." In that committee and in the House Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, the lawmakers, bruised by the sting, seek to tighten guidelines, think in terms of possible new legislative proposals, and shore up their defenses against any other government agencies that may be tempted to move on to Congressional turf.

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- Doctors of Hadassah Medical Center have ordered Aliza Begin back to the intensive care ward of the hospital. The Premier's wife was admitted to the hospital on the eve of Yom Kippur, suffering from severe respiratory problems.

BEGIN ADDRESSES UJA GATHERING

JERUSALEM (WNS)
-- Premier Menachem Begin won rousing applause from the one thousand strong UJA gathering in Jerusalem, when he declared the Lebanon war had ensured
"children in Galilee can go to school in peace and grow up without fear."

"We have nothing to apologize for," the Premier said, "We saved human lives...But indeed tragedies happen... Unforseen . . . They mar great events."

The Premier's address was the closing event in the five-day gathering in which one thousand top UJA leaders toured north Israel and south Lebanon, met with Navon, Sharon, Peres, and Begin and spent time in the "Project Renewal' areas with local renewal activists.

Begin in his speech asserted the war had strengthened Israel's deterrent power and ensured peace for the forseeable future. Syria and Jordan "would not dare" and were "not capable of" attacking Israel, and Egypt abided by the peace treaty which Israel had, "with great pain and suffering" fulfilled "to the letter, on the dot."

He called for immediate resumption of the Camp David autonomy talks for "full, real autonomy" and once again stressed that Israel would never agree to a Palestinian State.
