

"BOTTOMS UP" CELEBRATES ITS 26TH YEAR

maturing, but still brash, energetic and enthusiastic 26 year old, it just only seems to get better each passing year.

The ingredients for success have been kept simple: make people laugh with outrageous gags, pretty girls, scintillating choreography and toe - tapping music.

That recipe has garnered both Wall, his co-producer Patrick Maes, and the talented cast numerous awards, including several Las Vegas entertainment awards. The show, which is constantly being contemporized and updated, has played many major Las Vegas hotels, as well as playing to hundreds of thousands of crowds from New York City to Sydney, Australia.

The current Bottoms Up, '83 offering, comfortably ensconced in the elegant and intimate Copa Room of the Sands through July 15, features many of the show's regulars, such as David Harris and Sue Motsinger, dazzling choreography by Cary La Spina, and lively music by Marc Fitch and the Bottoms Up Orchestra.

Showtimes are at 8 p.m. and 10 p.m., nightly, with three shows, at 8 p.m., 10 p.m. and 12 midnight, on Saturdays. The $10.95 per person price, plus tax and gratuity, includes two drinks. For show reservations, call 733-5453.

SOPHISTICATED LADIES AT D.I.

"TAKE THAT, E.T.!" -- BOTTOMS UP REGULAR DAVID HARRIS IS SHOWN SPOOFING BEN KINGSLEY AND THE RECENT ACADEMY AWARDS GARNERED BY "GHANDI."

Little did master showman Breck Wall know that his "Bottoms Up" revue would develop into one of America's top entertainment success stories when he stepped out onto the stage of the Century Room at the posh Adolphus Hotel in Dallas on July 1, 1958. At the time, he had scraped together $1,200 to produce a fast-paced musi-comedy farce reminiscent of the zany "Hellzapoppin" revues of the '30's and '40's, made famous by the comedy team of Olsen & Johnson.

"It's funny to look back," he said recently, and think that we were being paid $900 a week for the whole show. The dancers got $70 a week and the principals were paid $85. I was pocketing $120 a week which," he laughed, "is still my salary."

The magic of the Bottoms Up format has now spanned over two decades. And, like a
