

Memories For Sale

BY HERB BROWN

The word memory is defined as the ability to remember; capacity to retain or recall that which is learned experience — but its meaning as a noun is much deeper than its definition. Like other words that have a more in depth meaning, memory certainly has more meaning to us than the sterile dictionary defines it to be, other words like love, devotion, duty, mother, father, children, can these words be taken on its face meaning with no more feeling than mere definition? Of course not. What sensible individual would settle for this? Memory along with those other words are in a class by themselves. They are the classics of the English language, the drum beat of our hearts and consciences. When we sit in the Synagogue on The High Holidays filled with meditation and prayer, memory becomes as important as our lifes blood. It is as a wise sage said "that memory is the single treasure from the past that one may keep with him or her to the grave." Like our lifes blood, take away our memories and you kill the person.

Who hasn't on this our Holiest of Holidays recalled in our minds reminisces of days and years of long ago? Who hasn't jogged and cuddled our minds to help us relive events in days past, which intermingled with sadness and happiness, makes us realize the awesome truth that we are making quick progress toward accomplishing our "turn" on earth. As practical people we know that which is gone will never return, and the closest we as mortals can come to remembering our departed loved ones is only by memory and also by a permanent remembrance which is now located in the Coblentz Chapel. The permanent one is of course the best one since it is permanent — we could lose our memories but we will never lose the items of permanence that are in the Coblentz Chapel. What are these permanent items? They are beautifully stained windows, and other religious ornaments which we know after you view them you will immediately fall in love with. They are nominally priced to fit everyone's pocket and they are selling fast. And truly a fitting remembrance to your loved one.

Las Vegas Nutritionist Helps Failing Eyesight

Dr. Stanley Weiner, Ph. D., Nutritional Director of the Las Vegas Clinic for the Low-Sighted and Nutrient Deficient, has developed a treatment that can restore failing eyesight in most patients.

People with eye problems, such as Macular Degeneration, Glaucoma, Cataract and Diabetic Retinitis, frequently feel they have nowhere to turn after traditional treatment has failed. These and other eye problems can be aided through Medical and Nutritional Monitoring.

Dr. Weiner developed the program when he was unexpectedly stricken with blindness and informed by medical practitioners that he had to accept the fact there was a possibility that he would become totally blind in the near future.

Dr. Weiner stated, "Our Holistic guidelines are completely safe and painless and they emphasize the health of the entire body. Our goals at Clinic are to teach people how to improve vision through optimal health. If a person is willing to change their Eating Habits and Life Style, there is a good possibility that our program can improve their vision."

The Clinic is located in Las Vegas at 1500 Tropicana Ave., Suite 110. Phone (702) 736-2825.

Soviets Said To Export Anti-Zionist Propaganda To the U.S.

NEW YORK (WNS) — The National Conference on Soviet Jewry (NCSJ) reported that a new film made by the Soviet government for export abroad, particularly to the United States, links Zionism with Nazism and racism. According to the NCSJ, the Film, "Babi Yar: the Lessons of History," is disturbing because it represents an attempt to expand the ongoing Soviet propaganda campaign personified by the three-and-a-half month old "Anti-Zionist Committee." Narrated in near flawless English and of high technical quality, it was apparently sent out to a wide variety of media outlets, including CBS NEWS, the Simon Wiesenthal Center and private individuals involved in tracking down Nazi war criminals.

The danger of the film, the NCSJ stressed, is that it has been well targeted. Its anti-Zionist message is subtle compared to that in Soviet propaganda geared for internal consumption: only a few telltale lines, uttered in a steady, matter-of-fact tone, are inserted into the roughly hour-long film. They appear, moreover, within the context of repeated admonitions like "Never again," and "We must never forget" — phrases which strike a chord in any Jew, and doubtless many others in the West.

I KNOW
WE SHOULD GO TO THE FUNERAL HOME

BUT, I NEVER KNOW WHAT TO SAY.

The fact is that nothing can be said to express adequately our loss or make the bereaved family feel better. But that doesn't mean that a visit and an expression of sympathy won't be helpful. Bereaved persons tell us that it's not the words that are helpful but that someone cared enough to go to the funeral home and express their sympathy in person. Sometimes just a hug or holding your friend's hand briefly is a good way to say "I care." When a friend loses a loved one go to the funeral home. Express your sympathy and offer your assistance. You'll be appreciated for caring.
