Tony Bennett Gets Bonds 'Israel's Friendship Award'

WASH. (WNS) — The natural wonders of Israel, as depicted in the colorful paintings of artist Philip Ratner, set the stage for the gala Ambassador's Ball at the Washington Hilton Hotel where the popular entertainer, Tony Bennett was honored with Israel's Friendship Award.

The inscription on the plaque presented to the singer by Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne, cited Bennett for "his unique artistry and special talents" that "have captured the hearts of men and women everywhere" and "in appreciation of his friendship for Israel and identification with its humanitarian ideals and its aspirations for peace."

The Ambassador's Ball, an annual event under the patronage of the Israeli Ambassador in Washington and his wife, coordinated by the State of Israel Bonds, drew 1,000 guests, including members of the Administration and of Congress, the ambassadors of many countries, Washington Mayor Marion Barry and leaders of American labor.

Las Vegas Hilton Offers Free Craps School

"You're invited to learn how the good times roll!" So reads the sign that announces a new program at the Las Vegas Hilton: free lessons detailing the game of craps.

Considered by many to be the most exciting of casino games, craps often intimidates a novice with its many varieties of bets. Many times, a novice will go into a live game cold and not fully understand the many aspects of the game, that at first seem quite complicated.

The Las Vegas Hilton has taken the gamble out of learning this exciting game with a step-by-step seminar that outlines all the intricacies of craps. A casual, yet thorough approach is taken during the instruction that lets those in attendance learn at their own pace. The session ends with mock games, where students can actually play craps, with no risk, and get the feel of the game.

The Las Vegas Hilton conducts their free craps school at 10:30 a.m., Wednesday through Saturday. The lessons are held at the west end of the casino floor and are open to the public.
