

Report Cites Incidents Of Soviet Harassment

WASH. (WNS) — The recently intensified Soviet campaign to curtail informal contacts between Soviet citizens and foreigners was highlighted by several incidents last July. These were summarized in the monthly digest on monitoring activities issued by the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE).

As examples of the Soviet Union stepped-up campaign, the digest cited the detainment of former Israeli President

Ephraim Katzir by the Leningrad KGB, the detainment of U.S. diplomats Jan Purnell and George Glass for two hours by the Moscow KGB on July 4, and the refusal by Soviet authorities to grant Soviet citizens who are married to Americans the right to emigrate.

The digest quoted Katzir's Paris news conference after the incident in which he stated he had been "subjected to some pretty tough questions" during the 1-1/2 hours he and his wife were detained. Katzir said that after three KGB agents blocked his attempt to visit a Soviet Jew, they took him to an office where they questioned him about his movements in the Soviet Union. Katzir stated he was "deeply offended" by this incident and noted that the KGB officers knew he had been President of Israel.

The report explained that the July 4 incident occurred when the two U.S. diplomats tried to meet with Lina Tumanova, a Moscow human rights activist with whom they had been in contact. All spending sleepless nights since the Olympic Games began in Los Angeles. Because of the time difference, Israelis are staying up until the early morning hours to watch the live coverage of the Games.

Prof. Yitzhak Levin, head of the sleep research laboratory at Bar Ilan University, warned that prolonged and continuous lack of sleep may have a detrimental effect and may even cause a disaster on the job or at home. Levin suggested foregoing watching the live coverage of the Games and getting a good night's sleep. He suggested that those who cannot do without watching the TV coverage should get a video casset recorder.
