

Valley Bank Makes Contribution To The City Of Las Vegas

"A number of people come before the city councilman asking for something. We at Valley Bank would like to give something back to the city of Las Vegas," stated Valley Bank President, Peter Thomas as he presented a check for $1,000 to Mayor Briare at a recent city councilmen's meeting.

The funds will be used to purchase a picnic shelter for a city park. According to Thomas, the money was donated in appreciation of the use of Lorenzi Park for Valley Bank's recent annual employee picnic.

"I would like to be among the first to thank Valley Bank for their generous contribution to the city. It's refreshing to see a business organization so dedicated to the welfare of our community," stated Chris Stanfeld, Director of Parks, Recreation and Senior Citizen's Activities for the city.

Olympic Memorial Service

Joseph Siegman, Executive Vice President of the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel and head of the International Jewish Sports Hall of Fame, and Mimi Weinberg, wife of the late Moshe Weinberg -- Israel's wrestling coach murdered by Arab terrorists at the Munich Olympics in 1972 -- participated in a memorial service for the Munich 11 at the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles. Siegman presented Mrs. Weinberg with a California State Resolution proclaiming July 26 as "Remember the 11 Day." Over 500 community leaders and former Olympians participated in the service which took place on the eve of the XXIII Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

Two Prominent Australian Jews Were Targeted For Assassination

MELBOURNE (WNS) — The Prime Minister's Office has declined to comment on a report that Labor Party leader Bob Hawke and two Australian Jewish community figures were the targets of an assassination plot by a militant Palestinian organization in the mid-1970's.

According to the report, the plot was foiled by the Australian Security Intelligence Organization whose agents infiltrated the Palestinian group. The group was not identified.

Hawke has been Prime Minister of Australia since March, 1983 when he defeated the Liberal Party government of Malcolm Fraser. At the time of the alleged assassination plot, about 10 years earlier, he was president of the Australian Council of Trade Unions and an outspoken friend of Israel.

The two Australian Jews marked for killing were Isi Leibler, currently president of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, co-chairman of the Australian Institute of Jewish Affairs and a member of the World Jewish Congress Executive; and Sam Lipski, a former Washington correspondent for The Jerusalem Post, presently Australian correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, a former editor of the Australian/Israel Review, and a frequent contributor to the Australian press. Laurie Oakes, a political journalist and Canberra commentator for the Australian Television Network, owned by publisher Rupert Murdoch, alleged assassination plot was made by
