James Ohriner Seeks Assembly 41

Nevada Assembly Sergeant At Arms James Ohriner announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Assembly District 41.

Ohriner, an attache to the Nevada Legislature for 4 sessions, was elected Assembly Sergeant At Arms twice, the youngest in U.S. history. James Ohriner has been politically active for over a decade, before either of his opponents moved to Las Vegas. The Las Vegas native has lobbied for parental rights, voter rights, animal protection, higher standards of education, and fair utility rates. He has received Service Awards from schools and the Optimist Club of Las Vegas for his efforts.

James Ohriner is employed as a Communications Consultant while, this year, completing his degree in Communication Theory at UNLV. He is a member of the Clark County Democratic Central Committee, Paradise Democratic Club, and National Legislative Services and Security Association.

The Budget, education, renter's rights, and crime will be top priorities in the next session, Ohriner says. "My opponents both favor increasing the number of taxes we already pay. One favors taxing services, while the other says that he wants to broaden the tax base. I feel that the tax base is broad enough." Ohriner also criticized the incumbent for abstaining on the vote on the budget, opposing campaign reform, and increasing penalties on several crime bills. He also questioned why his Democratic opponent failed to file his Campaign Financial Disclosure forms on time.

Candidate Al Bishop State Senate District #6: "Vegas Needs A V.A. Hospital"

In announcing his candidacy for the State Senate District 6 seat, Republican Al Bishop vowed to try to bring a Veterans Administration hospital to Las Vegas.

Bishop, 63, 520 Starfire Circle, said too many veterans now must travel to California for hospitalization. He said he knows of veterans who died because they refused to stay in a hospital so far away from their homes and families.

Southern Nevada has more than 70,000 veterans, he added. No other area in the nation with such a large veteran population lacks a Veterans Administration hospital, he said.

In making his first bid for political office, Bishop will find himself in a primary battle with Ray Rawson and Joni Wines. Democratic Assemblyman Roger Bremner also has announced his candidacy for the seat.

District 6 is an area now served by retiring Sen. Keith Ashworth. It covers most of northwest Las Vegas and surrounding unincorporated areas of Clark County, including Indian Springs.

Besides the hospital issue, Bishop said he is concerned that workers injured on the job are not "getting a fair shake" from the State Industrial Insurance System.

Workers often are stuck with the same monthly benefits they received when they first were injured, he said. Despite the ravages of inflation, a man injured 10 years ago may be receiving the same initial benefit, he added.

After suffering an on-the-job injury in 1981, Bishop said he was forced to retire.
