

Palestinian Terrorist Base Hit By Israeli Warplanes

TEL AVIV (WNS) — Israeli warplanes hit a terrorist base near Majdel Anjar in East Lebanon, an Army spokesman reported. The planes destroyed buildings at the base in the Bekaa Valley that was operated by Palestinian rebel leader Abu Musa. All Israeli aircraft returned safely to their base.

The Army spokesman said the base has been used as a departure point for attacks by terrorists operating from behind Syrian lines in east Lebanon. Another base used by the Abu Musa terrorists was bombed August 16 after their leader claimed responsibility for a thwarted car-bombing attempt in Jerusalem.

The attack followed reports that three Israel Defense Force soldiers were wounded in South Lebanon within 24 hours. Both incidents occurred in the area known as the "iron triangle" which is inhabited by Shiite Moslems who have carried out many attacks on the IDF in recent weeks.

The IDF instituted new security arrangements at the Awali River Crossing in this region, including a "terminal building" where passengers and vehicles are searched, to reduce the amount of arms smuggling between the north and south of Lebanon.

Israel Shifting South Lebanon Security To South Lebanon Army

Cohen told Israel Radio that the army is spending six billion Shekels (about $17 million) to fortify the eastern front in Lebanon where the IDF faces Syrian forces, and to prepare for winter. The work includes the construction of approach roads, new fences, anti-tank ditches and measures to prevent terrorist infiltration. Cohen said that in the past six months the army engineers dealt with scores of booby traps, roadside bombs, Katyusha rocket launchers and car bombs.
