Trial Is Ordered To Settle Disputed Sale of Judaica Books

NEW YORK (WNS) — A state Supreme Court judge ordered Sotheby's auction house to freeze all assets from the sale last June of a collection of rare Judaica books and manuscripts thought to have been destroyed by the Nazis in World War II.

Judge Robert White also ordered that a trial be held to determine the rightful owner of the manuscripts, dating from the 13th through the 19th centuries, and that the international auction house make available to Attorney General Robert Abrams, who brought the suit against Sotheby's, a list of all individuals who purchased materials at the June 26 auction.

The court action by White is the latest development in the running battle between the auction house and the Attorney General's office. The auction was contested when Jewish organizations questioned the ownership of the materials, many of which came from a rabbinical seminary in Berlin, The College for the Scientific Study of Jewish Culture.

It was revealed recently in an affidavit filed by Sotheby's that the alleged owners of the items are Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Guttman. Dr. Guttman, 82 years old, is a professor at a rabbinical seminary in Cincinnati. He has claimed he was given the books from the Berlin seminary to smuggle out of Germany and is the rightful owner of the materials.
