

Technion Film Wins Award

Theodore Bikel featured in prize-winning film: "High Tech...from Technion, Israel Institute of Technology."

NEW YORK — "Future Tech...From Technion" — a documentary film illustrating the contribution of the Technion and its graduates to Israel's science-based industries — won a bronze medal in the 1984 International Film and TV Festival of New York. The 15-minute color film was produced for the American Society For Technion-Israel Institute of Technology by Yale Roe, TRC Productions Int'l, for the Technion's 60th anniversary celebration. The film, which features actor-entertainer Theodore Bikel as narrator, demonstrates the impact of the Technion and its graduates on the success of high-technology industries in Israel. The viewer goes behind the scenes of Israel's largest science-based industries where Technion graduates are forging innovations in the areas of robotics, electronics, agriculture, aeronautics and medical instrumentation.

The 16mm film is available for viewing free of charge through all ATS regional offices and the national ATS office in New York.

The Technion is Israel's foremost institute for advanced technological education and applied research. Today, seventy-five percent of all engineers and scientists working in Israel are Technion graduates. Ranked among the top ten technological institutes in the world, the Technion plays a pivotal role in advancing Israel's leading edge in such areas as aeronautics, computer software and graphics, medical instrumentation and microelectronics.

Suspect Nabbed In 1982 Murder Of Israeli Diplomat In Paris

PARIS (WNS) — The French authorities have in custody the alleged leader of a Lebanese terrorist organization who is believed to have master-minded the murder of an Israeli diplomat here more than two years ago.

The suspect, a Lebanese Christian identified as Abdullah Georges Ibrahim, is said to be the head of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Fractions which claimed credit for the slaying of the Israeli official, Yaacov Bar Simantov, in the lobby of his Paris apartment building on April 3, 1982.

French security sources also believe they know the woman who did the actual shooting, with a 7.6 mm. German-made handgun. She was identified as Josephine Abdo, 26, also a Lebanese Christian and said to be associated with Ibrahim's terrorist group. Her present whereabouts are unknown but she may be in Italy, the sources said.

Bar Simantov, 42, was Second Secretary in charge of political affairs at the Israel Embassy in Paris. He was approached by a woman while waiting for an elevator in his building in a fashionable section of Paris. When she ascertained his identity she shot him twice in his head.

students are taken step-by-step through the particulars of a casino game by veteran Hilton dealer Hugh Cunningham. Learning at their own pace, students can ask questions and participate in mock games until they get the feel of the game and become comfortable with it.

Open to the public, with no obligation, the Las Vegas Hilton's free gaming lessons are divided into four segments: baccarat, craps, roulette and "21."

Baccarat, a game that carries the myth of being complicated and only for the very wealthy, is actually quite simple. The Las Vegas Hilton offers lessons in this exciting game Wednesday through Friday at 11:00 a.m., in the baccarat pit.

Craps, or "dice," is the game that symbolizes the excitement of Las Vegas. With a fast-paced action that can intimidate a novice, this game offers many varieties of bets. The Hilton offers two sessions of instruction for craps, fully outlining the many aspects of this multi-faceted game. The first session is conducted at 10:30 a.m., Tuesday through Saturday, and the second session is offered at 3:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday only. All sessions are held in the dice pit and run approximately 1-1/2 hours.

Roulette and "21" are the most popular games on the casino floor. While less complicated than other games, they offer the player a high degree of excitement.

The Hilton conducts lessons in roulette Tuesday through Saturday, at 2:30 p.m., and "21" lessons are also held Tuesday through Saturday, at 12:45 p.m. Sessions for these games are conducted in the "21" pit.

The Las Vegas Hilton's gaming lessons program has enjoyed a great deal of success since its inception last July. Cunningham's classes have yielded a strong turnout, averaging approximately 16 people per session.

The Hilton's instructional program has been widely received by casino patrons because it gives them a basic understanding of the various games and by doing this, it has helped to increase their chances of winning.
