Rabin Expects U.S. To Increase Economic Aid

NEW YORK (WNS) — Israel Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin left for Israel after a series of meetings in Washington with President Reagan and senior Administration officials and following a hectic weekend in New York where he made speaking appearances before three American Jewish organizations.

Rabin, who had breakfast with Mayor Edward Koch, stressed in his remarks in New York his appreciation for the Administration's decision to provide Israel with increased military aid for the 1986 fiscal year by $400 million, bringing the total of military assistance to $1.8 billion. "This is the highest military assistance Israel has ever got and it is all in grants," Rabin told a meeting on February 1 of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. Israel had asked for $2.1 billion in military aid.

In an address before more than 300 people at UJA-Federation headquarters here, Rabin said he believed the Administration will increase economic assistance to Israel by more than $1.2 billion as a grant. Washington, however, has yet to make a final decision on Israel's request for additional economic aid, Rabin noted.

In his address to the Presidents Conference, Rabin said that Israel is currently going through a period of great economic difficulties which were mainly caused as the result of the cost of peace with Egypt, which he estimated at around $5 billion, and the war in Lebanon, estimated to cost Israel some $3 billion. He said that in addition, "other economic mistakes" have contributed to the current economic crisis.

Rabin also addressed more than 400 Jewish leaders at a dinner sponsored by the Prime Minister's Club of the Israel Bond Organization in New York January 31. He said that Israel was withdrawing from Lebanon because "we decided that we are not going to be any longer the policemen of Lebanon. Let them solve their own problems," he declared to the applause of the audience.
