

B'nai B'rith Opposes Cemetery Visit

B'nai B'rith believes that reconciliation with today's Germans is valid. But it does not take place in a cemetery where SS troops are buried.

Scheduling a Presidential trip to a concentration camp in order to mute criticism of the cemetery visit is an attempt to perform a moral balancing act. It cannot be done.

We believe the trip to the Bitburg Cemetery was wrong. It is an affront to all who fought against the Nazi madness and to the memory of those -- Jews and non-Jews alike -- who suffered torture, enslavement and death at the hands of Hitler and his SS.

It is also wrong to characterize the SS troops as some kind of helpless victims -- thus equating them with the defenseless men, women and babies they murdered.

If we seek symbolic gestures to demonstrate the spirit of reconciliation between our two countries, it would seem there are more appropriate ceremonies available.
