Grand Opening Party For Bourbon Street

RIBBON CUTTING...The age-old ritual is ably performed by (l to r.): Vice President/Secretary, Bourbon Street Hotel and Casino, Inc. Jerry Suich; Las Vegas Mayor Bill Briare; Controller, Carma, Ltd., Alan Norris; President of Bourbon Street Hotel and Casino, Inc., Paul McAteer; County Commission Chairman Thalia Dondero; and Bourbon Street's Chief Operating Officer James J. Avance.

If the grand opening party for Bourbon Street Hotel and Casino is any indication, a bright future is in store for that newest of Las Vegas gaming resorts.

Almost 2000 enthusiastic invited guests showed up for the gala event, scheduled two days prior to its official public opening on July 1.

By the time of the 8 p.m. ribbon-cutting, a good portion of the casino, lounge and restaurant areas contained a crowd of well-wishers, eating, drinking and celebrating the birth of this new entity and anticipating its boost to a nicely-recovering Las Vegas economy.

The sounds of a live dixieland band filled Basin Street Lounge with its infectious 2-beat rhythms, and the festive mood was enhanced by sounds of old friends seeing each other again, as happens on occasions like this.

The ribbon-cutting outside the main entrance was ably performed by Chief Operating Officer Jim Avance and parent company Carma, Ltd.'s Vice President Paul McAteer, with the assistance of Las Vegas Mayor Bill Biare and County Commission Chairman Thalia Dondero.

Also stopping by to extend his best wishes was entertainment legend Jerry Lewis, his wife Sandi and Joe and Claudia Stabile of his staff.

The media, working and otherwise, showed up in force for the fun evening.

"We're extremely pleased with the huge turnout," stated Avance. "We have felt positive about Bourbon Street from the beginning, and this heart-warming reception only increases our optimism for a bright and successful future."

Peres Warns Knesset — Israel Should Agree To Arbitrate Taba Issue

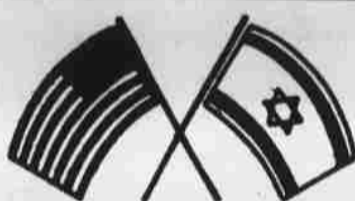

JERUSALEM (WNS) — Premier Shimon Peres warned the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Security Committee that if there is no agreement on arbitration over Taba, Israel's relations with Egypt would deteriorate. Peres said he could not negotiate with Egypt over the terms of the arbitration unless there was first an Israeli decision-in-principle to accept arbitration.

Peres' remarks followed his failure the previous week to push through the Inner Cabinet his proposal that Israel agree to Egypt's longstanding demand for arbitration over Taba. The Premier proposed that Israel agree to arbitration as part of a package deal, worked out in prior diplomatic negotiations, involving a return to normalization between the two countries.

The five Likud Ministers in the 10-man Inner Cabinet lined up behind Deputy Premier Yitzhak Shamir, the Likud leader, who continues to urge that Israel insist that the process of conciliation be tried before agreeing to submit the Taba dispute to arbitration.

Taba is a small strip of beach south of Eilat, claimed by both Israel and Egypt. Peres has long held that a breakthrough on Taba would lead to an across-the-board rapprochement with Egypt, which in turn would pave the way to a broader effort on the peace front.
