Voices Concern

ATHENS (WNS) — The president of the Greek Jewish community, Joseph Lovinger, said he was deeply concerned by the "inflammatory campaign against Greece" arising from charges in the United States and elsewhere that lax security at Athens airport contributed to the hijacking of TWA flight 847.

The U.S. government has issued an advisory to American citizens against travel to Greece and some American Jewish leaders have called on Jews to boycott that country. But Lovinger, in a message to the World Jewish Congress issued "a call to our coreligionists" to end a campaign of "grave and unfair accusations" against Greece.

He expressed regret

Dear Michael:

As part of its on-going reasearch, the Simon Wiesenthal Center is seeking to locate individuals who were involved in liberating Auschwitz and Theresienstadt.

Anyone with personal experience or knowledge of others should contact:

Gerald Margolis, Ph.D. Director

that Greece, of all friendly countries, has been "unjustly singled out as a convenient scapegoat." He charged that "a tragic event is deplorably exploited in order to serve other, less obvious purposes than airport security at Athens. According to Lovinger, who described himself as a frequent air traveler, security at Athens airport is on a par with that of most other major international airports, except possibly Ben Gurion Airport near Tel Aviv, one of the safest in the world.
