

101 Shiite Prisoners Released

TEL AVIV (WNS) — One hundred and one detainees were released from the Atlit military detention compound and taken in three buses to Ras Bayda, a tiny coastal settlement some 10 miles south of Tyre. They were handed over to Red Cross representatives who transported them to Tyre, Sidon and other destinations inside Lebanon.

The detainees, Shiite Moslems and a number of Palestinians, were among the more than 700 whose release was demanded in June by the Shiites who hijacked a TWA jet and held 39 Americans hostage for two weeks. Between April and August, close to 1,000 detainees were released in a series of stages. Both Israel and Washington affirmed this was not part of a deal with the Shiites.

Some 250 detainees are still in the Atlit camp, awaiting their release. These are the last of about 1,200 who were transferred there last April after Israel dismantled its Ansar prison camp in south Lebanon when the Israel Defense Force withdrew.
