

Barbie's Trial Postponed Again

PARIS (WNS) — The trial of Klaus Barbie, supposed to have opened last spring and then rescheduled for November, has been postponed to early next year. The prosecution says a new investigation is required because some documents recently found in the State archives differ from documents supplied by Nazi-Hunter Serge Klarsfeld.

Barbie's lawyer, Jacques Verges, who has promised a fierce fight in behalf of his client, said there were discrepancies between the list of names of Jewish deportees in the Klarsfeld documents and those in the archives. The key list is that of Jews deported on August 11, 1944 aboard the last "death train" to leave Lyon.

The investigating magistrate, Christian Riss, has dismissed charges which fall under the statute of limitations. Thus, war crimes cannot be prosecuted 20 years after the events. Crimes against humanity are not covered by the statute of limitations.

The newly discovered documents will have to be submitted to all parties to the case, including hundreds of groups and associations which have filed civil actions against Barbie.

The former SS officer, now 72, has been in custody since early 1983. He escaped from Europe shortly after the war when he was sentenced to death in absentia by a French court. He found haven in Bolivia where he prospered under the alias, Klaus Altmann. He was expelled in 1983, after Bolivia's ruling rightwing military junta was overthrown, and handed over to French authorities.

TEL AVIV (WNS) — The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra (IPO) is poised to leave for a month-long series of concerts in Japan, West Germany and the U.S., under the baton of Leonard Bernstein. The main work to be played during the tour will be Mahler's Ninth Symphony, which Bernstein described as "the most Jewish piece ever written."
