had made a partial recovery of his immune defenses, the first such case known. This victim was in the early stages of AIDS, which he had acquired from blood received from abroad to treat his hemophilia. He was given the biological THF, not the synthetic kind, and has recovered sufficiently to be discharged from the Beilinson Hospital.

The second, older, patient returned to Israel from the U.S. where he had acquired AIDS, but was in the final stages of the disease.

After treatment with the biological THF, his immune system improved slightly, but he died later of complications. Bornstein says that the youth was the first AIDS case stopped by external treatment.

Police And Military Patrol Tunisia's Jewish Quarter

PARIS (WNS) — Tunisian army and police units were called out to patrol near the former Jewish quarter in Tunisia where many of Tunisia's remaining 5,000 Jews still live. Armored cars were stationed at strategic points and helicopters hovered overhead after hundreds of angry youths tried earlier in the day to stage an anti-Israel and anti-American demonstration.

The Tunisian radio said that the would-be demonstrators ran through the city center shouting "Israeli killers" and "revenge."

Police units were also stationed near the U.S. Information Service in the center of the city and the American Embassy in the northern suburb.

Anti-American feeling is running strong throughout the country because of President Reagan's initial backing of Israel's right to defend herself against terrorist attacks. President Habib Bourguiba summoned the U.S. Ambassador, Peter Sebastian, to blast America's policy as "one-sided."
