Gaylord St. James In KREL-Radio Debut

Actor, singer, humorist, talk show host GAYLORD ST. JAMES begins a weekly syndicated talk show in the Las Vegas market, highlighted by St. James' dramatic readings, comedy sketches, contemporary commentary, and guest stars, this week on KREL-RADIO. The multi-talented performer has appeared in numerous film and television shows, on Broadway and in Las Vegas.

Gaylord's show is produced, directed and conceived by Steve Sheldon, C.D., President of Starshine Enterprises, Las Vegas. Sheldon will also produce the upcoming St. James syndicated television show.

"We wanted a completely different format," says St. James, "that audiences could really get involved with; not only actually listening but by their call-in participation. Each week (the show airs every Saturday at 1:00 P.M.) I'll be reading, in 'character' as it were, a horror or short story classic by an Edgar Allan Poe, Bret Hart, O. Henry, etc. We also welcome original, unpublished works by new and undiscovered writers to showcase on the air. The show is something like a radio "Twilight Zone."

Adds producer Sheldon, "We believe that radio -- the way RADIO used to be -- may be making a real comeback. People want to be informed, entertained and stimulated. AND, they also want to be heard! "The Gaylord St. James Show" offers listeners a unique and diverse format and platform. It becomes, in effect, the audience's show."

Gaylord St. James is well known to film horror fans as one of the stars of the now cult classic "The Last House On The Left" which has had a huge popular revival via home video cassettes and theatrical re-runs.

Rest In Peace Helen A. Trapani

Helen Trapani has left us, but she'll never be forgotten. She was a daughter, a sister, a wife, a mother, and lastly but most importantly, she was a grandmother. She was a wonderful neighbor who valued her friendship in the court on Tara Avenue, and was a second mother to the children there where she lived for the last 21 years.

Everyone knew Helen and loved her. She was always there if you needed her. Her door was always open. After her husband, Frank, died, Helen's life was never quite the same. She was plagued with illness and had to be hospitalized for serious heart and vascular trouble. But when her daughter Cathy was ready to have her baby, it looked as though things were finally going to take a turn for the better.

She put aside all her health troubles and left Las Vegas to join her daughter for the birth of her grandchild in Albuquerque. In her usual fashion, Helen pitched right in to give Cathy support and was there when Cathy was admitted to the hospital to deliver the baby. What began as a normal admission rapidly turned into a nightmare. Cathy began to suffer unheard of complications during the delivery process, and Helen almost lost her and the baby. It was obvious to everyone in contact with Helen during this terrible time that the strain of this unbelievable nightmare would pose a serious health threat to her. We know now that Helen was a very sick woman who could not survive this kind of stress. As soon as Cathy began to recover from her horrible experience, and her new granddaughter Melissa Marie began to breathe on her own, Helen's heart quietly stopped beating. She knew they would be all right. We must find some comfort in knowing that Helen kissed her beautiful granddaughter and offered her own life to save theirs. Her last prayer was, "Please, God, take me, not them." Helen is with her husband now. They're both with little Joya, and we must believe they're able to rest now that they're together. We'll miss Helen always. She was a good woman.
