Bill In Congress To Investigate U.S. Aid To Nazi Collaborators

WASHINGTON (WNS) — A bill was introduced in Congress to establish a special commission that would investigate U.S. assistance to Nazis and Nazi collaborators following World War II. Announced by Rep.

Barney Frank (D. Mass.) at a press conference, the bill charges the proposed commission with finding out how many Nazi war criminals or collaborators came to this country after the war with the knowledge or help of U.S. officials, and the extent to which the officials were aware of the Nazi backgrounds of the new immigrants.

It would also investigate the nature and extent of deception and law-breaking said to have been committed by U.S. intelligence agency officials in an effort to bring former Nazis and collaborators to this country, and more recently, in an alleged attempt to cover up the entire affair.

The call for an independent commission follows the completion by the General Accounting Office (GAO) of its second investigation into the question of U.S. intelligence involvement in bringing former Nazis and collaborators into the country. The report was immediately criticized by Elizabeth Holtzman, Brooklyn District Attorney, as "painfully limited and inadequate," and her criticism was endorsed by numerous Jewish groups.
