

Exchange Program Seeks Local Coordinator

The American Institute for Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation is looking for local coordinators in this area.

The Foundation encourages international learning and cultural awareness through its Academic Year in America program. Students participating in the program come from about twenty countries in Europe and Asia. They live in American homes, take the normal high school curriculum, and become involved in the daily life of the community. In addition, they have their own spending money, are fully insured and speak English.

Local coordinators are needed to select host families and supervise the students throughout the program.

The AIFS Scholarship Foundation, as a participant in President Reagan's "Youth Exchange Initiative," shares the goals of developing greater international understanding. "Today's teenagers face a rapidly shrinking world in which jobs in business, government and education frequently require daily communication and decision-making around the globe," said Paul A. Cook, Executive Director of the Foundation. "It is important that both foreign and American youth have an opportunity to learn from one another and enter adulthood with basic international competence. Still, the greatest benefit of the program is the experience and friendship which develops between host families and students."

You can share in this rewarding experience by being a local coordinator for the AIFS Scholarship Foundation. For more information, call R. Joseph O'Donnell at (800) 458-7100.

TEL AVIV (WNS) — A man was killed and two others seriously wounded in a blast at a Hadera power plant which officials said was a mishap, Israel Television reported. It quoted plant officials as saying that terrorists were not responsible.

MGM Theatre Features "Stars That Shine Forever"

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA — One of the most unusual movie theaters in America — and certainly the most comfortable — is appropriately enough in the MGM Grand Hotel.

From the outside, the theater, in the downstairs Shopping Arcade, looks like a 1940's movie palace, but the inside is designed to look like a Hollywood screening room, with soft, luxurious loveseat coaches and lots of room.

In front of each couch is a cocktail table, and on the edge of the cocktail table is a red button. Just press that red button, and a cocktail waitress will be there to take your order so you can enjoy yourself while watching the movie.

Best of all is the price: just $3.50 adults, not including the cocktails.

On January 1, the MGM Grand Movie Theater began a film festival entitled "Stars That Shine Forever," and it will continue until February 18.

The movies to be featured are:

Jan. 8-14 - "A Farewell to Arms" (1957) with Rock Hudson and Jennifer Jones.

Jan. 15-21 - "The Grapes of Wrath" (1940) with Henry Fonda and John Carradine.

Jan. 22-28 - "Spellbound" with Ingrid Bergman and Gregory Peck.

Jan. 29-Feb. 4 - "Sunset Boulevard" (1950) with William Holden and Gloria Swanson.

Feb. 5-11 - "The Country Girl" (1954) with Grace Kelly and Bing Crosby.

Feb. 12-18 - "The Lady From Shanghai" (1948) with Orson Welles and Rita Hayworth.
