WASHINGTON (WNS) — Justice Department officials are expected to start shortly deportation proceedings against an accused Nazi death camp guard following a Supreme Court decision last week.

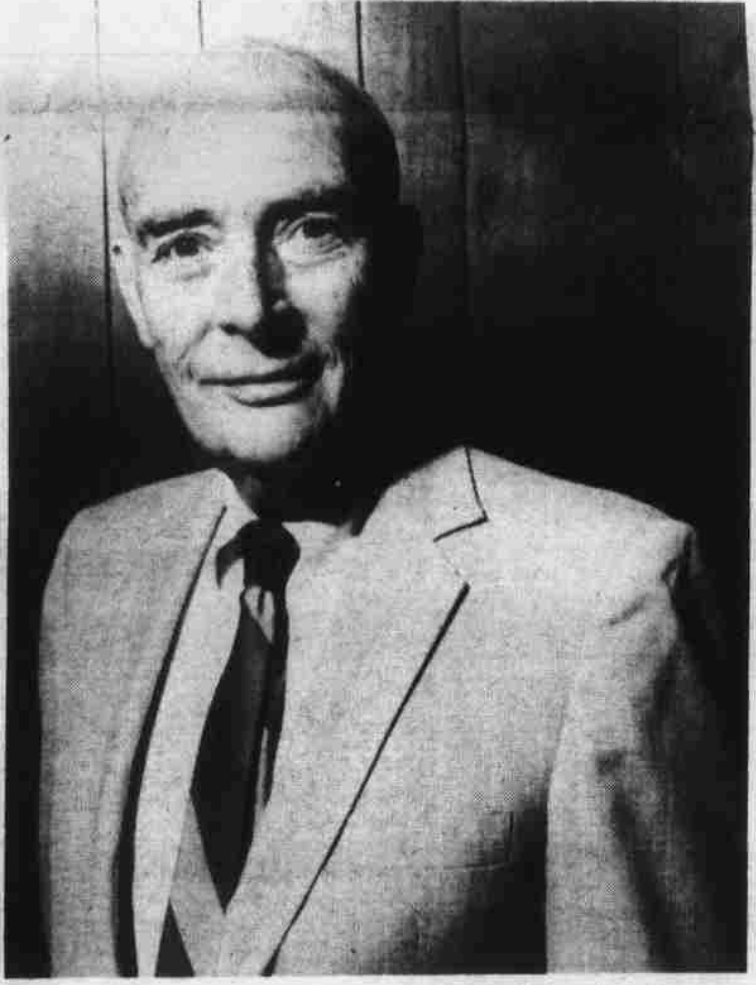

The High Court turned down a citizenship appeal by Luidas Kairys, 61, accused by the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations of concealing his past war time activities as a guard at the Treblinka death camp in Poland when he entered the U.S. in 1949.

Kairys maintains his innocence of the charges, saying that he was a farmer in Lithuania from 1940 to 1942, and that he was later captured by the Nazis.

The Supreme Court let stand a lower court ruling revoking Kairys' U.S. citizenship. The Court action clears the way for deportation proceedings, although the Justice Department said it was unsure at this time which country would seek to try him.

Statement By The Principal Deputy Press Secretary

The President met privately with Natan Shcharansky for thirty minutes in the Oval Office. Vice President Bush, Secretary Shultz, Donald Regan and John Poindexter were also present. Mr. Shcharansky thanked the President for his unflagging support for human rights in the Soviet Union, and his role in securing his release from a Soviet prison camp. He gave the President his assessment of the situation of Soviet Jewry, particularly the plight of 400,000 Soviet Jews who have expressed a desire to emigrate from the Soviet Union. He urged the President to continue his efforts on their behalf. The President expressed his admiration for Mr. Shcharansky's courage and fortitude, and reaffirmed his determination to do everything possible to help those who have been denied the right to emigrate, practice their religion, or maintain their Jewish identity. The American people, and the world, will not forget them.
