

Interior Design School Available Locally

Nancy Wolff, a native Californian and Award Winning Interior Designer moved to Las Vegas six years ago. Nancy has worked in the field of Interior Design since 1973 specializing in Commercial Design, Model Homes and Custom Homes. She was the Interior Design Co-ordinator for the Dunes Hotel on their expansion, The Oasis Casino. "I also love to teach and began to dream of a school...."

No longer does a person interested in pursuing a career in Interior Design need to travel out of state for schooling.

In just over two years, Nancy Wolff has built an impressive curriculum at Interior Design Institute, School of Interior Design, the only school of its kind locally.

The Institute is licensed by the Commission on Postsecondary Education and offers a one year curriculum. Nancy Wolff, founder of the school, plans to expand to a two year program in the near future.

Nancy, a professional member of the International Society of Interior Designers, has worked in the field since 1973. When Nancy came to Las Vegas from California six years ago, she saw the need for a School of Interior Design. A school with high standards and professionalism on all levels. Planning and developing the school format took Nancy almost a full year. "To perfect the curriculum, I consulted with Ron Baron, my former teacher, and also the founder of a chain of Interior Design Schools. Since its inception, I have constantly refined and expanded the curriculum until its present status of excellence," states Nancy.

"Becoming an Interior Designer changed my life! I went from being an ordinary housewife to achieving a career in design that I LOVE. I have transformed my life in a most creative and financially rewarding way through this field, and I wanted to share my exciting career with others."

The instructors at the Interior Design Institute are all professionals, so you are receiving an education from people actually working in the design field. Many interior designers already working in the field come to the Institute to further their education by taking courses in various specialized phases of the program. "A good interior designer is constantly perfecting their skills through continuing education. They are then able to keep up with the ever-increasing variety of choices available when creating environments," states Nancy.

You can feel the enthusiasm of the students the minute you enter the doors. The friendly warmth and spirit of happiness is one to which you instantly adapt.

The school offers a beginning and advanced course. Forty nine students have already graduated from the Institute. They are looking forward to larger classes every year.

"What many people do not realize is that they save money in the construction or purchase of a new home by hiring a designer. Clients normally overbuy merchandise, and a designer is trained to know exactly what to purchase. Therefore, the knowledge of a qualified designer is invaluable to someone buying or building a home. A designer sees more wallcovering, fabric and furniture in one day than most people see in a lifetime," says Nancy.

Last year Nancy started her own Designer's Showroom (to the trade-for Interior Designers only) adjacent to the school. The Showroom catalogs and contains everything necessary to design a project from beginning to completion. This offers students and professional designers the opportunity to investigate the vast resources available today.

The Showroom now offers its services to retail clients. Graduate designers are working in the Showroom and are able to assist clients at a considerable savings.

Now, are you someone who would enjoy being an Interior Designer? If so, why not stop by and view first-hand their very complete and exciting program. You may find a whole new career for yourself.

The Institute offers a free monthly seminar that explains Interior Design as a career. The school is located at 4225 S. Eastern Avenue, #3. For information call 369-9944.

Egyptian Tourism Minister Cancels Visit To Israel

JERUSALEM (WNS) — Tourism Minister Avraham Sharir expressed regret at the cancellation of a scheduled visit here by his Egyptian counterpart, Fuad Sultan. No reason was given for Sultan's cancellation, nor was a new date set for the visit.

Sharir, meanwhile, expressed some dissatisfaction that efforts to revive tourism between Israel and Egypt were not making progress. Israeli tourism to Egypt has been lagging since the massacre of seven Israeli civilians by a berserk Egyptian policeman at Ras Burka in the Sinai last October. The victims were part of a group of 27

Israelis who had gone on a Succot camping trip to Sinai.

Egypt is now expected to hand over to Washington this week its reaction to the latest proposal regarding the wording of the Taba arbitration document. Senior sources at the Foreign Ministry here indicated that there are still several obstacles remaining before that document is signed.

These obstacles include the maps which will be used by the arbitrators; the third impartial arbitrator, in addition to the Egyptian and Israeli arbitrators; and the question of financial compensation to the families of the Ras Burka victims.
