Mideast Conference

WASHINGTON (WNS) — The Reagan Administration asserted again that if the Soviet Union wants to be part of the Middle East peace process it should begin by re-establishing diplomatic relations with Israel.

spokesman Bernard Kalb said recently that there is "a long list" of things the Soviet Union can do to "demonstrate a willingness to play a constructive role in the search for a Middle East peace" beginning with "the establishment of relations with the State of Israel." Kalb would not elaborate on the list, but in the past other items have included increased Jewish emigration and an end to harassment of Soviet Jewry.

Kalb's remarks came after he rejected a Soviet proposal for a conference on the Middle East comprising the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council -- The U.S., Soviet Union, France, United Kingdom and the People's Republic of China.

French President Francois Mitterrand said two weeks ago at a press conference in Moscow after his talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev that Gorbachev has suggested the conference. Mitterrand indicated his support.

the "U.S. experience in the past" with meetings preparing for international conferences and the conferences themselves have been that they are used for "posturing and rhetorical excess instead of real hard negotiations."
