

Another Young Israel Sweepstakes Winner

Police Disperse Rioters At A-Najah University In Nablus

TEL AVIV (JTA) — Disturbances erupted at A-Najah University in Nablus after it reopened following a week-long closure on orders of Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Soldiers fired rubber bullets and tear gas at Arab students but no injuries were reported.

The university was shut down a week ago because of riots on the campus and at the nearby Balata refugee camp. Classes resumed Tuesday morning, but soon students streamed out to the main road, stoned passing vehicles, burned tires and unfurled

Palestinian flags.

Soldiers called to the scene forced them back on the campus. The students barricaded themselves in the university buildings for several hours while troops stood by Jerusalem, an Arab outside. By evening the truck was stoned by students dispersed Jews in the Shmuel quietly. No further Hanavi quarter clashes were reported. Tuesday afternoon. The windshield was broken but the driver was unhurt. Shmuel Hanavi was the home of yeshiva student Eliahu Amdi who was fatally stabbed in the Old City.
