Israel's Security And Anti-Terrorist Devices To Be On Display Next June

TEL AVIV (JTA) — The latest security and anti-terrorist devices, reflecting Israel's years of experience in that field, will be featured at the first international congress and exhibition promoting the export of such items to be held here next June. About 100 manufacturers will participate.

The exhibition, called "Sedat" an acronym for security, defense and anti-terrorism, will be financed by the Ministries of Police, Defense and Commerce and Industry. The devices will not only be displayed but will be demonstrated in mock hijackings and hostage rescue operations.

The equipment includes highly sophisticated robot sappers already in use by the Israeli police to dismantle suspicious-looking objects. Much of it is less than five years old. Exports of such devices are expected to reach $60-$70 million this year.

Countries interested in them include The Netherlands, Finland, Brazil, Argentina, Zaire, and Japan which are expected to send delegates to the congress and exhibition.
