Israeli Professor To Speak On 'Bringing The Human Touch To Community Medicine'

Shimon Glick, M.D., medical school dean of Israel's Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, will speak on "Bringing the Human Touch to Community Medicine" at an upcoming educational forum.

The forum, "Sharing with the World" Israel's Ben-Gurion University of the Negev Comes of Age," will focus on the university's considerable contributions in the fields of medicine, desert agricultural research and social research.

Joining Dr. Glick at the Forum, scheduled from 9:00 a.m. to 12 p.m. Sunday, March 6, 1988, at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, will be Professor Yosef Mizrahi, Ph. D., senior scientist of the Institute for Applied Research, and the Department of Biology; and Professor Frederick Lazin, Ph.D., Department of Political Science.

In his talk, Dr. Glick, dean and professor of Medicine, Faculty of Health Sciences, and director of Kupat Holim Health services in the Negev, will focus on the unique Beer Sheva approach to medical education that teaches students to explore not only their patients' medical histories but social and economic conditions contributing to their health as well. The Center for the Health Sciences also coordinates health care for residents throughout the Negev, which includes Israel's Ethiopian immigrants and the Bedouin population.

Ben-Gurion University of the Negev will celebrate its "Chai" or 18th year in 1988, coinciding with the 40th anniversary of the founding of the State of Israel.

Inspired by the vision of Israel's founding Prime Minister, David Ben-Gurion, the university was established by the Israeli government in 1969 to spearhead social, scientific, agricultural and industrial growth throughout the country's arid southern region.

Co-sponsors of the March 6 Forum include the Community Relations Committee of the Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles; Southern California Council of B'nai B'rith; San Fernando Valley Council of B'nai B'rith Women; in cooperation with the Mayor's Committee to Celebrate Israel's 40th Anniversary.

The upcoming forum is free and open to the public. An optional lunch, at $30 per person, will immediately follow the morning program.

The university is supported in the United States by American Associates, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, 292 S. La Cienega Blvd., #322, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. For more information, please call our office at (213) 854-6161.
