Cy Young Winner Hurls
The Desert Inn Dice

Rick Sutcliff (second from right), Chicago Cubs pitcher and Cy Young Award winner, recently tried his hand at the craps table in the Desert Inn Hotel & Casino. The 6'7" right-hander threw the dice as well as he throws his fast ball. Sutcliff was vacationing in Las Vegas with his wife and friends. The foursome also played golf on the Desert Inn's championship course and attended the National Finals Rodeo. Pictured are (from left) craps stickman James Phillips, Dana and Connie Zander of Lee Summit, Mo.; Dual Cooper, Desert Inn vice president of casino games; Robin and Rick Sutcliff; and craps base dealer Roscoe Smith.

Artists At Boulevard Mall

Colorado artist Carole "Crittter" Bourdo drawing with prisma pencil.

Noted for her drawings of Indian heritage, Bourdo also draws mountain men and cowboys. Bourdo's famous drawing of the "Old South Dakota Bronc Rider" shows in the background.

Israeli Arab Sentenced To Life For Killing Soldier

JERUSALEM (JTA) — An Israeli Arab convicted of killing a soldier narrowly escaped the death penalty in a Nablus military court.

Ahmad Ali Abu-Jabar, of Kfar Kassem near Petach Tikva, was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of IDF soldier Akiva Shealtiel on April 6, 1985.

Two of the three judges hearing the case favored the death penalty, but it was not imposed because the prosecutor failed to demand capital punishment and one of the judges dissented. The death penalty cannot be imposed without a unanimous vote of judges trying a case.

Col. Yeshoshua Halevy, president of the court, in fact reprimanded the prosecutor. He said the death penalty was called for in this case, because the accused is a citizen of Israel who betrayed his country by killing a soldier.

Accordingly to the authorities, Abu-Jabar belonged to an Al Fatah terrorist gang, which tried several times to kidnap Israeli soldiers, finally succeeding with Shealtiel. After his murder, they fired at a bus and tried to kill a local leader in the Arab town of Kalkilya whom they suspected of collaboration with the Israeli authorities.

During the sentencing procedures, Shealtiel's family tried to attack the defendant. He was rushed into an adjoining room under the protection of soldiers.
