Shultz Stresses Human Rights

Last Chance To Live In Caribbean At Paradise Springs Community

Torino Industries is closing out The Caribbean model at its award-winning waterscaped community of Paradise Springs in southeast Las Vegas.

The Caribbean is an executive home with three bedrooms, two and a half baths, plus spacious family room and kitchen area. The master suite and master bath area has his and her wardrobes and a sliding glass door view of the lushly waterscaped Paradise Spring.

Upstairs are the other two bedrooms, one with a walk-in closet, the other with wall-to-wall wardrobe. The home was originally priced at $169,000, according to Doug Deaver, vice president of Torino Industries.

NEW YORK (JTA) Secretary of State George Shultz began his visit to Moscow by raising the issue of human rights with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze as well as a group of refuseniks.

Shultz devoted most of his initial talk with Shevardnadze to what an American official called "a wide and broad exchange" on human rights and emigration in which the secretary reportedly heard that the Soviets would waive the restriction allowing emigration only to appli-

Iosif Begun Plants A Tree

Iosif Begun, former Soviet refusenik who recently arrived in Israel, plants a tree in the Jerusalem Corridor on Tu B'Shevat, Israel's Arbor Day. Mr. Begun, known as the "Hebrew teacher," waited nearly 17 years for an exit visa from the Soviet Union, where he was arrested and exiled to Siberia three times for alleged anti-Soviet activities. In honor of his release, the Jewish National Fund recently announced plans to revitalize tree-planting efforts in JNF's Iosif Begun Forest, located in Yatir, Israel. Mr. Begun's wife, Nechama (Ina), holds another sapling for planting. Joining the Beguns in the moving ceremony are JNF-Jerusalem representatives Avraham Kalman (left) and David Angel.

On The Current Unrest In The Administered Territories

By Senator Malcolm Wallop

(EDITOR'S NOTE): Senator Malcolm Wallop (R-Wyoming) takes a careful look at the recent unrest in the Israeli-administered territories. By examining both the historical basis for the Palestinians' plight and the nature of the current violence, the Senator brings a sober, balanced perspective to the issue. Senator Malcolm Wallop's home state of Wyoming has the smallest Jewish population of any state in the Union. His staunch support for Israel during this difficult period reflects his commitment to a strong and secure Israel.)

The Palestinians live in a limbo where social and economic stresses, coupled with political frustration, fester into violence. The latest clashes in Gaza, the West Bank, and in Israel proper are just another outburst of Palestinian anguish and anger at their hopeless situation; a situation begun when the Arab states prevented the emergence of a Palestinian state alongside Israel in 1948 and continued by the Arab states' refusal to negotiate peace with Israel and a solution to the Palestinian problem.

The Gaza Strip is a particular center for violence, because it has always been an impoverished and neglected area. Still, conditions there have improved since Israel began administering the territory in 1967. The permanent curfew imposed by the Egyptians was immediately removed. Gazans may travel to other Arab countries and receive visitors from abroad, something denied them by Egypt. Over sixty hospitals and clinics have been built, and eighty-eight percent of the homes in Gaza now have electric power, up from eighteen percent under Egypt. Israel has also built thousands of units of modern, low-cost housing for the camps' inhabitants, although Arab and PLO leaders pressure the Palestinians to stay in the camps as a political weapon against Israel.

Although the American media has reported only Palestinian casualties and played down the actions of the rioters, Israel's stern measures to
