

Woman Who Lured Vanunu Named

LONDON (JTA) — The identity of the mysterious blonde woman who lured former Israeli nuclear technician Mordechai Vanunu out of Britain in September 1986, to eventually face trial for espionage and treason in Jerusalem, was disclosed in this week's edition of the Sunday Times of London.

The Sunday Times is the newspaper to which Vanunu, once employed at Israel's nuclear facility in Dimona, gave facts and figures about Israel's alleged nuclear weapons capabilities. His nemesis, according to the newspaper was Cheryl Bentov, 28, the American-born wife of a former major in Israeli military intelligence. The Sunday Times claimed that Bentov, working for Mossad, the Israeli secret service, in-troducted herself to the lonely, nervous Vanunu in London, as "Cindy."

He traveled with her to Rome on September 1 and was kidnapped there by other Israeli agents and taken to Israel against his will.

The Sunday Times account contradicts the Israel government's denial that it was involved in anything illegal on British soil.
