

Israeli Soldier Wounded In Lebanon

TEL AVIV (JTA) — An Israeli soldier was lightly wounded in southern Lebanon recently by a land mine that exploded. The soldier, who was not identified, was flown by helicopter to Rambam Hospital in Haifa, after receiving on-site first aid treatment. The incident occurred while the soldier was on routine patrol in the eastern sector of the border security zone, some two miles west of Zomria village. Sources in southern Lebanon said it was likely the mine had been planted by the extremist Shiite group Hezbollah, in retaliation for recent operations conducted north of the security zone by the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army.

Elsewhere in the region, a Fijian soldier serving with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon lost an eye in an attack on a UNIFIL post near Siddikin village, east of Tyre. He was taken first to the UNIFIL hospital at Nakoura and from there sent by helicopter to Rambam. He was reported to be in a stable condition.

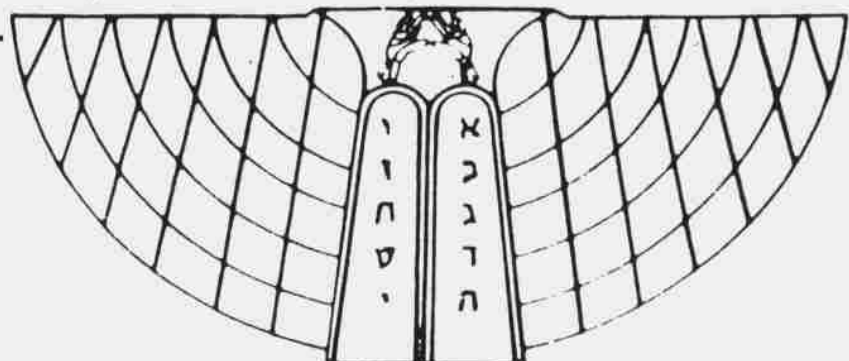

The attack was denounced by the leaders of the mainstream Shiite Amal militia, which pledged continued support for the presence of the U.N. peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

TEL AVIV (JTA) — Eight young Jewish university graduates from the Soviet Union arrived in Israel recently for a stay on a kibbutz.

They are the first to participate in the "Russian Orange" project, which is being jointly sponsored by the Mapam-affiliated Kibbutz Artzi, the Jewish Agency and the Foreign Ministry.

The students will attend a special Hebrew-language ulpan set up for them at Kibbutz Ein Dor for 10 to 12 weeks, and will also work half a day on the kibbutz.

They will be adopted by kibbutz families and will tour the country and attend seminars. Initiators of the project hope that the participants will immigrate to Israel and will choose to live on a kibbutz.
