

Silver City Roulette Dealer Celebrates 40 Years In Gaming

FORTY YEARS IN GAMING — Curtis Carter, a roulette dealer at the Silver City Casino, celebrated his 71st birthday early this month. Born in 1918, Curtis, a spry "leprechaun" of a guy, has been involved in Las Vegas gaming since 1948 and has his original sheriff's card to prove it! Curtis migrated to Southern Nevada in the forties from rural Illinois, and began his career as a shift at the old Pioneer Club on Fremont Street. Among his many colorful

Revlon In Israel Sponsors Annual Contest For Shenkar College Fashion-Design Students

Natural fabrics and colors characterized the designs of the first-year fashion-design students taking part in the annual Revlon-Shenkar design competition, who were given the theme of the Book of Ruth.

RAMAT GAN, ISRAEL — There is a saying that the first time that something takes place, it's a miracle. The second time the same event takes place, it's a blessing. By the third time, it's a tradition.

It may thus be said that the Revlon Prize for Shenkar College Fashion-Design students is now well-entrenched as a tradition, with the contest taking place for the third year in a row. Revlon memories are Curtis' recollection of the final approval for the now famous Vegas Vic sign, a downtown landmark. Curtis and fellow employees celebrated with champagne, a traditional birthday cake and appropriate festivities at the strip casino. Then it was back to the roulette table where his Silver City smile will continue to keep customers happy for many years to come.

(Israel) created the prize for the recognition of developing talent, directing it to the first, second and third-year design students.

Certificates for first place and honorable mention were awarded to winners from each class, and a contribution of $10,000 was made to the College, which is a four-year institution awarding Bachelor's degrees in textile technology, textile chemistry, industrial management, fashion design and textile design.

Each year, themes are given to each class. This year, the Revlon-Shenkar competition was based on books of the Bible. The first-year students were given the motif of the Book of Ruth, with the challenge to design garments of natural fabrics in natural colors. Second-year students were asked to clothe Eve, the first lady of the Book of Genesis, for the beach. The third-year students designed evening-wear for the ancient court of Shushan, according to the Book of Esther, with elements of gold, silver, red, blue and purple.

Members of the audience at the fashion show — which included established Israeli designers, journalists and managers of the Israel Export Institute, which has given its official sponsorship to the contest — enthusiastically applauded all the designs and the decisions of the judges. Continuing, perhaps, with the biblical theme, the judges exhibited their Solomonic wisdom, awarding two first prizes and two honorable mentions to the third-year students.

Some 1300 students have graduated from Shenkar College, and about 70 percent of them work in Israeli fashion and textile houses and technological firms.
