

Registration Now Underway For 1996-'97 School Year At The Hebrew Academy

SCHOOL IN SESSION - Marty Paz, an 11th grade student at the Hebrew Academy, uses a microscope in the school's science lab. Registration for the Hebrew Academy's 1996-'97 school year is underway, with classes open to students in pre-K through 12th grade. For more information on registration, or to enroll your child for the 1996-'97 academic school year, call 255-4500.

The Hebrew Academy in Summerlin is now accepting registration for its 1996-1997 school year, open to students in pre-K through 12th grade. The school provides approximately 50,000 sq. ft. of classroom space that hosts a range of programs and activities, including the Early Childhood Development Institute; a complete auditorium, state-of-the-art science center; computer and language labs.

The school offers a comprehensive academic curriculum grounded in an ongoing program of Ethics and Values, which permeates all campus activities. In addition, a small student/teacher ratio allows for optimal teacher attention and small group instruction - creating a positive learning environment.

The results of such an interactive method of instruction is evidenced by the fact that students at the Hebrew Academy have consistently scored in the highest percentiles in the Iowa Test of Basic skills, a standardized assessment test administered to school children across the United States.

Since its inception in 1979, the Hebrew Academy's philosophy in educational excellence and innovation has garnered both awards and national recognition. It has also allowed the school to make tremendous strides in anticipating current technological trends providing its students with the latest in high-tech equipment.

The school's extensive computer program offers both student and teacher access to the Internet and to a variety of multimedia systems, making the Hebrew Academy the only school in Las Vegas - and one of only three percent of all schools in the United States - to provide such services.

Students become familiar with the World Wide Web and multimedia access as early as the fourth grade, while each high school student has exclusive use of his or her own computer. The Academy's one-to-one student-to-computer ratio is also the highest rated in Nevada.

In 1995, the Hebrew Academy made headlines in USA Today when it implemented the University of Cambridge's Advanced International Certificate of Education (AICE) program. The international pre-college curriculum offers a rigorous course of studies and awards a certificate of admission to international universities and advance credit at American colleges.

A member of the national Association of Independent Schools, the Hebrew Academy also is the only school in Nevada to offer ACT and SAT testing on Sundays.

The Hebrew Academy is the first and only non-parochial, non-profit, accredited college preparatory school in Nevada with programs for 3-year-olds through 12th grade. For more information on registration, or to enroll your child for the 1996-1997 academic school year, call 255-4500.
