

Peres: Talks With Syria Yield Agreements On Ties, Economy

JERUSALEM, Israel (JTA) - Prime Minister Shimon Peres recently said that Israeli and Syrian negotiators meeting in Maryland had reached agreements in the areas of normalization of ties and economic issues.

Speaking to reporters accompanying him on a trip to England, Peres also said talks on security arrangements were on the right track but that no agreement had been reached in that area.

Also, the same day, the delegations wrapped up their latest round of talks at the Wye Plantation in eastern Maryland.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher was in Jerusalem and Damascus to continue efforts toward an Israel-Syrian peace.

U.S. officials lowered expectations that Christopher's shuttle would produce a peace accord.

But State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said the United States would press ahead in trying to reach an accord, even if Israel decides to hold early national elections.

U.S. Ambassador to Israel Martin Indyk, in an address at Bar-Ilan University, said no breakthrough should be expected from the shuttle mission.

"These are serious negotiations and very serious issues are being discussed," he said. "They are not amenable to quick-fix solutions."

Meanwhile, in Paris, Yossi Beilin, minister without portfolio in the Prime Minister's Office, said time was running out for a peace deal. He said it was important for an accord to be reached in 1996 because of the elections in Israel and the United States.
