BEAUTIFUL OLD INDIAN LEGEND

The Transformation of Leaves into Birds Still Believed. An Indian story that has been handed down and is still believed by many Indian tribes is one about the transformation of leaves into birds, says the Kansas City Journal. Long years ago, when the world was young, the Great Spirit went about the earth making it beautiful. Wherever his feet touched the ground lovely trees and flowers sprang up. All summer the trees wore their short green dresses. The leaves were very happy and they sang their sweet songs to the breeze as it passed them. One day the wind told them the time would soon come when they would have to fall from the trees and die. This made the leaves feel very bad, but they tried to be bright and do the best they could so as not to make the mother trees unhappy. But at last the time came and they let go of the twigs and branches and fluttered to the ground. They lay perfectly quiet, not able to move except as the wind would lift them.

The Great Spirit saw them and thought they were so lovely that he did not want to see them die, but live and be beautiful forever, so he gave to each bright leaf a pair of wings and power to fly. Then he called them his "birds." From the red and brown leaves of the oak came the robins, and yellow birds from the yellow willow leaves, and from bright maple leaves he made the red birds; the brown leaves became wrens, sparrows and other brown birds. This is why the birds love the trees and always go to them to build their nests and look for food and shade.

How He Would Stop a Runaway.

A returned traveler who spent half of his holiday in a tour of Ireland brought back a sample of the happy-go-lucky wit of the Irish "Jarvey," or driver. In a breakneck race down a hill he suddenly realized that the spirited little Irish mare was running away. "Pull her up!" he shouted, excitedly. "Hold tight, your honor," returned the Jarvey, easily. "Pull her up!" again commanded the traveler, making a grab for the reins. "For your life don't touch the reins," the Jarvey answered, without tightening his grip. "Sure, they're as rotten as pears." The traveler made ready to jump, but the Jarvey laid a soothing hand on his shoulder. "Sit easy," he said, reassuringly. "I'll turn her into the river at the bridge below here. Sure, that'll stop her."—Reynolds' Newspaper.

Seats of the Mighty. Of all the chairs of church or state—Bench, woodcock, throne, or what you will—'Tis written in the book of fate The high chair is the highest still.

Lolled in his office chair, there sits The master of a thousand mills; Men toil or rest as he permits; Men fall or prosper as he wills.

Perched on the polished bench, where strife Cries to condemn or pleads to save, Sits one, and blots the light from life, Or nods another to the grave.

Squat in his place of power, behold The monarch of a mighty land! And destinies are lightly told, Toyed in the hollow of his hand.

But over all and over each Another sits, who must be reckoned; The eternal woman comes to teach The first of men he is but second.

Yet hardly is he's reign begun Till she must learn as she has schooled; For lo! there comes the helpless one, And rules the ruler of the ruled.

For chairs of church, or seats of state—Bench, woodcock, throne, or what you will—Are only relatively great; The high chair is the highest still;—Edmund Vance Cooke in St. Nicholas.

"Who was that plutocratic gentleman you just bowed to, Squiggins?" "That's the plumber who does all the work in my house during the winter months." "But you seem to have quite kindly feelings toward him, which plumbers are hardly used to after the presentation of their bills. But perhaps he has let you down easy?"

"Not at all. He soaked me and his other customers so hard that he has been able to buy an automobile out of his profits. But I tell you, I was mighty glad to see him just now, for it savored of revenge." "In what way?"

"That plumber was just coming out of an automobile repair shop. I'll bet he's got a taste of his own medicine there and it will bankrupt him just to keep the wheels of his 'devil wagon' running right. If this isn't poetic justice, what is?"—New York Herald.

Hold the Rope. Mike was but two weeks from Ireland when he secured a position in the household of a Pittsburgh millionaire. His brother, long in the employ of this master, coached the greenhorn and carefully tended to his progress. One day the telephone bell rang, and Mike, who had often heard the person at the receiver say, "Hold the line," was ordered by his brother to answer the call. The following is the conversation:

Voice—Who is that? Mike—It's me, Mike. Voice—I don't want you. Is Mrs. C. at home? Mike—Yes, she's right here, mum; just hold the rope.
