Avon Was Hard to Represent.

Some years ago W. L. Wilson, a native of Avon, Conn., was elected to represent his town in the state legislature. Avon, being at the head of the list of towns alphabetically, was always called first when a ye and nay vote was taken, and consequently Mr. Wilson, as its representative, was obliged to go on record first. Of this fact he used to complain bitterly, saying: "Avon is the hardest town in the state to represent, because you never can tell which way the majority is going to vote."

The Nevada Transfer company will do your heavy and light hauling. Leave orders at Boggs' Ice Cream and Confectionery parlor, or at the Gem Furniture store on Main street.

London's Undeserving Beggars.

It is calculated that in London alone about 4,600 persons regularly make a living by begging; that the average income for each amounts to $7.50 a week, or together over $1,500,000 a year. Last year about 2,000 persons were arrested for begging in the streets of London and many of them were possessed of considerable sums of money and even of bank books showing handsome deposits.

WANTED—Miners and muckers at the Potosi mine. Good wages, good board, good lodgings. Apply Mahoney Brothers.

Gladstone's Nickname.

It is impossible to imagine anyone bold enough to address Mr. Gladstone by his nickname, if indeed anything so profane as a nickname ever approached that august personage. As a matter of fact, Mr. Gladstone seems to have had a nickname, and to have been called "Merrypebbles" by some intrepid persons. But this was behind his back.—The Academy.

Tips to Flower Merchants.

The points noted in chrysanthemums are symmetry of the flower, the shape and arrangement of the petals and the color. The large touselled ones are seldom considered seriously in selecting the most perfect flowers for prizes. Carnations are the most satisfactory and profitable flowers for the florist. They bloom all year, and if you haven't carnations and roses you might as well go out of business.

About Quinine.

Quinine is obtained from the dried bark of the stem and branches of plants which were known at one time exclusively in South America. The Jesuit priests who introduced Christianity into that continent learned the use of the bark in cases of fever from the natives, and for a long time the Jesuits remained as the sole European repositories of the secret.

Cookery of the Past.

Though the oyster was known and eaten in the fourteenth century, it was thought to lack flavor, so they seethed it in wine with ground almonds and rice, powdered ginger, sugar and mace. A curious thing about old cookery books is their silence concerning quantity. "Take pleges yscalded," "take eelys," "take conynges or rabbits," is all the information which is given.

Firemen Play On Piano.

The Barton Opera-house Fresno-Cal., has a piano. It was to have assisted in a performance. But a tuner accidentally oiled it, just before the hour of the performance, with gasoline instead of kerosene, and then inspected the interior with a lighted match. So the only players on the piano that night were the firemen.

Khedive of Egypt Wisely Governs Subjects Who Hold Him in Reverence

(Special Correspondence.)

This is not the first visit which the Khedive Abbas II. has made to England, says a London correspondent. As long ago as 1900 he made his impression on London as man and ruler, and years before that he came among us, an immature youth, in fact, as well as in feeling, neither sure of his position nor what he meant to make of it.

The khedive we know now is a man of weight mentally; sagacious, painstaking and conscientious. He is solid in appearance, of middle height and of fresh and wholesome complexion; quite uneastern in this and quite unlike his "smart" Paris-loving brother, Prince Mohammed Ali; quite unlike his most distinguished-looking, slender-built uncle, Prince Hussein, who has, with his high-caste features and his bronzed skin, an expression of gentle melancholy.

Abbas II. is, before everything, a well-conditioned, contented-looking and yet very alert young man. His earnest nature is immediately apparent in his talk. After the manner of the east, he gesticulates, of course. But in public he does not laugh or even smile much. His greetings to his people as he passes among them are the most attentive and surely the most dignified of any sovereign. He gives the utmost devotion to all his duties and there is a letter box in the wall of the palace into which any Egyptian may deposit a written grievance.

Business and Pleasure.

Twice or thrice in the week he whisks along the Mohammed Ali boulevard of Cairo with his couple of outriders and small escort. It is not often later than 9 o'clock when he reaches Abdeen for the business of state, which is always transacted at the palace in the capital.

The khedive's country seat of Koubbeh lies seven miles out. In its exquisitely kept gardens and avenues the early morning hours are beautiful beyond description. The khedive has no more absorbing interest than the cultivation of his estates. As a horticulturist he is less ardent than his uncle, Prince Hussein, but arboriculture and agriculture on the most scientific lines he has made his own. The Khedival Agricultural society (which for some years past has had its permanent and very handsome buildings and inclosures at Gizeh) he never misses. And, in particular, he takes keen interest in the farm implements and sheds.

A sportsman Abbas II. is not. The horses that take him into Cairo on his fleeting missions of state are handsome chairs at the numerous small tables upon the pavement, not fifty yards from Shephard's, upon the opposite side of the way.

Of the True Religion.

Perhaps it was a touch of the "old Adam" that the speaker's religion increased with the speaker's prosperity. But the Egyptians are instinctively a religious race and Abbas himself is a deeply religious man, scrupulously attentive to all Moslem observances. He is always the central figure at the ceremony of the "Mahmal," when the holy carpet arrives and the fresh one departs for Mecca. During the Ramadan, the month of fasting, the khedive goes to prayers at the mosques of Omar and Saldna-el-Husseini, and at his highness' levee in Ramadan it is noticeable that he neither takes coffee nor offers it to his guests, as is otherwise the invariable custom.

A few of the gray-haired among his subjects look back with regret to the tinsel days of Ismail, when trickery, corruption and lax morality walked unchecked and unashamed and when society was almost exclusively official. But nowadays increasing commerce and extending industry are the prominent signs in Egypt. For the honest merchant, the hard-working fellah and for the general community no less, there have never been better times than those of our guest—the reigning khedive.

Judge Brewer's Ballif Story.

While on his way recently to Burlington, Vt., to visit relatives, Judge Brewer related the following incident: "An amusing thing took place in Washington in connection with the supreme court this last winter. There was a young man in the court room who was talking out loud, making a little confusion, and one of the old colored balliffs that we have there went in and led him out and said: 'Young man, you want to come out and be still. That is the supreme court of the United States in there! If they get after you, nobody in the world could help you! Nobody could help you—except the Almighty—and the chances are he won't interfere!'"

Russian Chemist Honored.

Prof. Dimitri Ivanovitch Mendeleef, one of the world's greatest chemists, received Sir Joseph Cowley's gold medal recently at the meeting of the Royal society. The medal is esteemed among chemists a high honor. Prof. Mendeleef, who was born in Tobolsk, Siberia, in 1834, possesses qualities of the most varied kind. He is chemist, geologist, philosopher and educationalist united in one personality.

"Yes!" replied the old shade with the long beard, moving away with a yawn. "I had a corner in live stock myself once. My name's Noah."

Beginning of Iron Industry.

The first iron forge within the territory now the United States was erected in 1652 at Raynham, Mass. This was preceded by a bloomery erected in Virginia in 1619. The first blast furnace with a forced blast was built about 1714, also in Virginia.
