Vast Sum Long Tied Up.

Thirty-five years ago in Birmingham, England, a man died whose will was contested, but finally allowed by the court. The provisions of it werenot to come into force in a quarter of a century, so that though he left four million sterling to be divided among three persons, one of them in the meantime had died in the workhouse. Their relatives, including the deceased pauper's heirs, are numerous, and all in a humble position in life. Some are factory operatives, some cabmen, some beer-shop keepers. After twenty-five years of hope, despair and heartburning, this millionaire's wealth is about to be divided.

IN THE HANDS OF THE DEVIL.

"Camp Meeting" John Allen Seized

"Camp Meeting" John Allen, the famous Methodist divine of Maine, having held service in Portland one Sunday forenoon in summer, met an appointment at a crossroads schoolhouse in one of the rural districts in the afternoon. His fame went before him, and the little schoolhouse was crowded when he entered. Every seat being taken, he sat down on top of a desk by an open window.

During a season of prayer he leaned over, with head in hand and feet extending out of the window. A mischievous boy, seeing the pair of human appendages hanging from the window, and feeling comparatively safe from his position outside, seized one of his feet and commenced a lively tug thereat, when "Uncle John" started up, and, with his characteristic quickness of wit, exclaimed: "Pray on, brethren, the devil's got me."

Rats Cause an Explosion.

In a house at Sulby, near Ramsey, rats got at some powder, which was kept in a chest for quarry blasting, leaving a trail. Two men, named Cowley, were making a search with a candle when it fell from the candlestick, setting the powder on fire and causing an explosion. The men, who were badly burned, rushed out of the house and jumped into the river, as their clothes were ablaze. The house was wrecked.-London Daily Express.
