All the Comforts of Home.
"Nat" Goodwin, the comedian, once possessed a fine country house on the banks of the Thames river, near New-London, Connecticut. Every summer he used to invite some of his Thespian friends to join his house party.
On one such occasion Goodwin delivered himself of a bon mot that is worth repeating.
"Nat," said some one, "you certainly have a fine place here. Just think of it, a lawn right on the river!"
"Yes," drawled "Nat," "it's fine. In the spring we have the lawn on the river, and in the fall we have the river on the lawn."

Geography as She is Taught.
Little Rob was the prize geographer of his class; that is, he could locate cities and bound countries with great glibness. He could draw the most realistic maps, printing in the rivers, mountain ranges and cities from memory. Rob considered geography purely in the light of a game, in which he always beat, but he never associated it with the great world about him. Rivers, to him, were no more than black, wiggly lines; cities were dots, and States were blots. New York was green, Pennsylvania was red, and California was yellow. Of course Rob had never traveled. He was born in a canon near the country school he attended. One day the teacher made the discovery of Rob's idea of geography through the following incident. After vainly inquiring of several of the children where British Columbia is located, she called on Rob, who, as usual, was waving his hand excitedly, wild with the enthusiasm of pent-up knowledge.
"It is on page 68," he declared.
After the roar had subsided, the teacher explained that that was only a picture of British Columbia. Then she asked Rob to bound British Columbia.
"Can't, teacher; it is all over the page."—Success Magazine.

The Frigate Bird.
Note that small blue point in the heavens. Happy the serene region, which has rested in peace far above the hurricane! In that blue point, and at an elevation of ten thousand feet, royally floats a little bird with enormous pinions. A gull? No; its wings are black. An eagle? No; the bird is too small. It is the little ocean-eagle, first and chief of the winged race, the daring navigator who never furls his sails, the lord of the tempest, the scorner of all peril—the man-of-war or frigate bird.
Here we have a bird which is virtually nothing more than wings; scarcely any body—barely as large as that of the domestic cock—while his prodigious pinions are fifteen feet in span. The great problem of flight is solved and overpassed, for the power of flight seems useless. Such a bird, naturally sustained by such supports, need not allow himself to be borne along. The storm bursts; he mounts to loftier heights, where he finds tranquility. The poetic metaphor, untrue when applied to any other bird, is no exaggeration when applied to him—literally he sleeps upon the storm. When he chooses to soar his way seriously, all distance vanishes—he breakfasts at the Senegal; he dies in America.

FEATURES OF CAMPUS SPORT.

The Best and the Worst Found Most Sharply Defined in Football.
The best and worst features of campus sport are found most sharply defined in football. Now the fact seems often overlooked that the average American youth is both honest by instinct and keen for fair play. He enters college with a normal fondness for outdoor pastime. As one of his first impressions, he learns that the football team is a "complicated machine of infinite exactitude," from which the youth of average physical equipment is well-nigh barred. Then he discovers that the kind of game played by the few picked heroes is so difficult and exhausting that the three months' season suggests slavery far more than sport. He grasps the fact that rowing is a pursuit which demands a long and arduous training period in order to drill eight men into absolute harmony of action, and he does not see how working for the crew could be made any easier. But football, in bracing autumn weather, looks as if it ought to offer a fair field to any strong and plucky youth willing to endure hard knocks. Really there ought to be much fun in it, he thinks.
He finds, however, that players, trainers and coaches are thinking of nothing else than welding together eleven brawny giants into certain battering ram formations, the impetus of which shall be more deadly and lasting than that of a rival mass of beef and muscle on a certain afternoon three months distant. The freshman, standing in disconsolate idleness on the side lines, perceives also that in a university of perhaps two or three thousand students it is not considered possible to assemble eleven men of the standards of physique and intelligence required to form a "championship team," wherefore it is necessary to recruit among the preparatory schools and to throw out drag-nets for promising material among the smaller colleges. And this youngster of ours may be wise enough to glimpse the fact, which has eluded most of his perplexed elders busy with making more "rules," that the problem of keeping football clean in school and college rests not so much with the player as with the game itself.
In other words, a pastime which is so hard to play well, which contains so few of the essential elements of sport, and which cannot find its raw material among thousands of willing young men within its bounds, is certain to breed perverted ideas of the spirit and object of normally conducted athletics for the benefit of the greatest possible number. "Professionalism" in football would be shorn of its temptations to "win at any cost" if the game were such as the average student could learn to play well and to enjoy.—Century.

No Race Suicide There.
Frederick Starr, professor of anthropology of the University of Chicago, was about to set off on his two years' visit to Africa.
"You are going over there to study the pigmies, aren't you?" he was asked.
"That guess is only partially correct," Prof. Starr answered, "for I am going to study other things, too."
He smiled and went on:
"You remind me of a man who called at a house which the stork had just visited.
"Is it a boy or a girl?" said this man.
"Guess," said the father.
"A boy," said the man.
"You are only half right," the father answered with a sigh."

As a Boy in Germany.
Incidents of Youthful Roosevelt's Stay in Fatherland Years Ago.
When in the summer of 1873 the Roosevelt children were introduced to the Minkwitz family they had never spoken German and conditions in Germany were altogether new to them. Nevertheless, they soon adapted themselves to their new environment, especially Theodore, who showed remarkable ability. A few days after his arrival Miss Minkwitz's brother came home from the University of Leipzig, at which he was studying, according to Louis Vereck in Success magazine, and told the company a German students' joke. Everybody knows how deep these are. This joke must have been particularly good, for every one laughed, most of all Teddy. Fraulein Minkwitz was greatly surprised at this and asked him how he could understand it at all. Thereupon Teddy proceeded to repeat the whole story to her in English in a way which proved beyond doubt that he saw the point. "He seemed to pick up things—one didn't know how," she said.
At that time Frau Rat had in her service a good old servant girl named Emily, who had an admirer by the name of Charles, a fact which had escaped the Minkwitz family's attention altogether, although the girl had stayed with them for some years. Theodore had been in the house out a few days when one morning he created a sensation by saying: "Emilie, ich bin Karl; ich liebe du!" ("Emilie, I am Karl; I love thee!")
He was passionately fond of books on natural science, especially of Brehm's "Thierleben," which he studied eagerly. One day he got it into his head that he must have a rat, a mole or a hamster. When he asked Miss Minkwitz where he could get one she told him that she didn't know. The lad then began to investigate for himself and finally came back from the city swinging in triumph, like a trophy, a dead mole and a dead German marmot. He had discovered a man whom he had procured what he wanted. He him he procured what he wanted. He next went to work to strip the animals next went to work to strip the animals of their skins in the kitchen and prepared to boil them in one of Frau Minkwitz's saucepans. But here the good old Frau Rat interfered. He therefore went to the back yard, built himself a little oven from bricks, skinned the animals, and, after having boiled them, prepared them carefully, putting together skillfully all the parts of the skeleton.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous services.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

For Cuts.—Always keep some boracic lotion (made by dissolving one ounce of boracic acid in one pint of boiling water) by you for bathing cuts and bruises before applying dressing. To use, add to a little of this an equal quantity of boiling water, bathe the cut well with this, spread boracic ointment on a piece of linen, lay this over the injured place, and bandage. Unless the cut is painful, this dressing should not be removed until the place is healed over.

A General Antidote.—The following prescription is recommended as a general antidote for poisons. It can be put up by any druggist. A saturated solution of sulphate of iron, two ounces; calcined magnesia, two ounces; washed animal charcoal one ounce. Keep the iron in a bottle and the magnesia and charcoal in another. When used, add the contents of the two bottles to a pint of water, shake thoroughly and take from three to six tablespoonfuls.
Gargling.—It is very necessary to teach children early how to gargle the throat. It is not a difficult thing to teach a child, if taught before the throat becomes sore and the act becomes a necessity. The teaching may be made a pastime, and the knowledge so gained may save much trouble and suffering, and perhaps life itself. The benefit arising from frequently washing the mouth and throat with salt water cannot be overestimated. It is recommended by physicians as a preventive of contagious throat diseases.

The Water Filter.—Care must be taken to keep the water filter absolutely clean. The infringement of this simple rule has often led to terrible illness in a family which might so easily have been avoided. It has been scientifically proved that if a carbon filter is not cleaned for three weeks or a month, the water passing through the carbon may have become polluted and quite unfit to drink, four times as many more germs having been found in one case after the filtration as had previously been detected in the water.

Narcotic Stimulation.—Savage races of men feasted and starved alternately. When game was plentiful they feasted, but when game was scarce they starved. Since savages have poor facilities for killing game they starved much of the time, during which seasons of scarcity they were compelled to eat herbs or even grass. In this manner they discovered the narcotic effects of tobacco, poppies, hemp and similar properties of nuts eaten in green condition, also tea, coffee and cocoa. They found that after eating some of these herbs or nuts that they were apparently strengthened, or given greater endurance. As the races of men became more cultured and advanced they have made more uses of narcotics of every kind and yet this is no argument in favor of the use of narcotics. Many people do not realize that tea and coffee are narcotics. They are, however, among the most active nerve stimulants and the most injurious.

The Right of Way.
In the early days of Western railway-building—days not so long gone by as to be out of memory—there were many exciting races between rival roads for the possession of important mountain passes. Such a race, says the World's Work, was that between the Santa Fe and the Rio Grande roads for the right of way through Raton Pass, to New Mexico and the Southwest.
Engineers and construction gangs worked in mad haste to get to it ahead of their rivals. The victory fell to the chief of the Santa Fe. When the Rio Grande cohorts arrived they found him alone in one of the big gorges, shovel in hand, sifting earth from an eight-thousand-foot hill.
"What are you doing here?" they asked.
"Constructing a railroad," he replied. He turned another shovelful of dirt, dropped the tool and hitched up his heavy cartridge-belt.
"Any one who interferes with the Santa Fe does it at his own risk," he said, quietly.
First the Rio Grande men laughed, and then they raged, and then they turned and went away. Their road was cut off from the south forever.

CATARRH ANNOYING-DANGEROUS

Catarrh is usually regarded as nothing more serious than a bad cold or slight inflammation of the inner skin and tissues of the head and throat, when it is, in fact, not only a vexatious and troublesome disease, but a complicated and dangerous one. It is true that Catarrh usually begins with a cold in the head, but when the poisons, which are thrown off through the secretions, find their way into the blood, it becomes a constitutional trouble that affects all parts of the body. It has more annoying and disgusting symptoms than any other disease. There is a sickening and offensive discharge from the nostrils, a constant buzzing noise in the ears, headaches and pains in the eyes are frequent, while filthy, tenacious matter drops back into the throat requiring continual hawking and spitting, and in certain stages of the disease the breath has an odor that is very offensive. Catarrh is worse in Winter, because the cold weather closes the pores and glands, and the poisons and unhealthy vapors which should pass off that way are thrown back on the tender linings and tissues, causing the inflammation which starts the unhealthy secretions to be absorbed by the blood. When the blood becomes diseased with this catarrhal matter all kinds of complications may be looked for. As the blood circulates through the body the foul matter finds its way into the stomach, ruining the digestion and producing chronic Dyspepsia, or Catarrh of the stomach. It also affects the Kidneys, Bladder and other members of the body, while the general health is weakened, appetite lost and the patient feels despondent and half sick all the time. But worst of all, if the trouble is not checked the lungs become diseased from the constant passage of poisoned blood through them, and Catarrh terminates in Consumption, the most fatal of all diseases. You cannot get rid of Catarrh by treating it with sprays, washes, inhalations, etc., because they only reach the membranes and tissues, while the real cause of the trouble is in the blood. These relieve the annoying symptoms for a time, but the poison is all the while getting a stronger hold on the system and when they are left off will manifest itself in worse form than before. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and when it has cleansed the blood, this pure, rich stream circulates through the body, carrying healthful properties to the diseased parts. Then the inflamed membranes and tissues begin to heal, the discharges cease, the general condition of the system is strengthened, every one of the annoying and disgusting symptoms pass away, and the patient is left in perfect health. S. S. S. is the best remedy for Catarrh. It goes right into the blood and removes all effete matter and catarrhal poison and cures the disease permanently, and at the same time builds up the entire system by its tonic effect. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable remedy—non-injurious to the system and a certain, reliable cure for Catarrh. Catarrh sufferers will find our free consulting department helpful in advising local treatment to be used with S. S. S.

Several years ago my blood was bad and I had in addition a dreadful case of Catarrh. My nose was stopped up, I had headaches, ringing noises in my ears and felt unfit for work. I commenced the use of S. S. S. on the recommendation of a friend, and in a short time it cured me sound and well. It put my blood in good condition and I have never had the slightest return of the Catarrh since that time.
