Friday, July 21: "I ACCUSE," a Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe.

Adam and Eve

It is said that Eve's discontent grew out of a quarrel that she had with Adam. It started about clothes, of course. Adam, so the story goes, criticized Eve's fig leaf apron. He laughed when he first saw her with it on, said it was too short and showed that she was bow-legged—just as men talk of what is being revealed (with the accent on the "veal") to them now-a-days. That made Eve mad and she said, "I don't care A-dam." He reproved her for pronouncing his name that way, said it was unladylike and not in accordance with good taste. And right there the trouble began. Eve couldn't get a divorce for there were no courts, but she raised Cain.—Lake City (Colo.) Times.
