RUBBER AIDED THE MORALE OF SOLDIERS.

Aside from the incalculable aid rubber gave in the prosecution of the war in the form of war truck tires, balloons, boots and surgical supplies, rubber contributed largely in its essential relationship to the sports engaged in by American soldiers, which furnished such an extensive factor in the remarkable morale of our troops, according to F. Richard Carroll, District Manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company.

Athletic goods costing $150,000, the largest single order for athletic goods ever placed, was but one of the many shipments of sporting material shipped to Yanks in France. Among other items this order contained 4,800 soccer balls, 2,400 basket balls and 3,600 footballs, with 900 extra bladder, 3,600 footballs, with 900 extra bladders, all of rubber.

REPRODUCTION OF WONDERFUL PAINTING

"Lair of the Mountain Lion," the Feature of the Fayle Calendar For 1919.

The 1919 calendar sent out by the Fayle stores are beautiful works of art. The banner of one of them shows a reproduction of a painting by Moran of a scene from the Grand Canyon country which is wonderful in its glory of rich coloring. The scene reflects the beauty of things loved by Mr. Fayle during his life and was selected by him months before his death. Each time we gaze at its beauties we shall find in fond remembrance of the one whose kindly foresight brings now to his many friends the pleasure of this beautiful painting.

"The Lair of the Mountain Lion" was reproduced from the original painting by Thomas Moran, and printed and published by The Osborne Company, of Newark, N. J., with the following description:

The best way to appreciate a painting by Moran is to begin by remembering his career—for Moran is no painter who has lived all his life indoors, confining himself to a few sketches here and there, and building up dream pictures suggested by photographs or reading. He is a genuine explorer. What he paints, he has seen many times, with his own eyes. He has gone out into the wilderness to hunt pictures just as the trapper goes there to hunt game, and his wonderful paintings are the result of the very wonderful life which he has lived.

He was born in England, in 1837, 81 years ago. As a mere boy he was brought to America and began his art training as an engraver on wood, in Philadelphia. At the age of 25, in 1863, he went to England for further study, where the works of the famous painter, Turner, aroused his imagination and taught him the wonders of color. When he returned from England he had learned how to paint in that wonderful style which since has captivated thousands all over the world.

Having learned to paint, there remained for him the big problem of what to paint. In 1870 a most fortunate opportunity was given him. The United States Government undertook the exploration of the region now known as Yellowstone Park. Prof. Hayden was selected as the chief of the survey, and he invited Moran to accompany him. You can imagine the effect on the young artist, with his trained sensibilities and his eye for beauty, when he beheld the almost miraculous grandeur and wonderful coloring of our great West. He poured himself out in giving expression, in paint, to the wonders he had seen and, as a result, two magnificent pictures were purchased by the United States Government and now hang in the Capitol at Washington.

From that day to this, Moran has never been free from the lure of the West. He still goes to the Grand Canyon every fall. He has wandered over the country bathed by the Green River up through Arizona and Utah and Wyoming, with its wonderful rock formation, its wonderful vistas, its amazing color. Many of his best pictures come from that country, and this latest painting, from the Grand Canyon, is one of his most beautiful pictures.

A picture such as this performs a real service to humanity. Thousands of people have little opportunity to travel, and whose experience of the world is confined largely to the knowledge of their own neighborhoods. Except for books and pictures, they are deprived of one of the greatest educational forces in the world—for nothing educates like travel. These paintings by Moran bring the wonderful golden West to people who cannot go there. These pictures teach them more about the world. They stimulate curiosity; they lead to wider reading; and they even stimulate here and there, a boy to better work and to a more concentrated purpose, by making him realize the rewards the world offers for success, thereby stimulating him to greater efforts to achieve it.

In Mr. Moran's picture, note the beautiful effect of a Gothic window formed by the little group of trees through which, in the distance, shines in golden light the tip of a rocky peak along the canyon wall.

Mrs. N. E. Williams entertained the ladies of the Auction Bridge Club with a 1:00 o'clock luncheon Wednesday. This was the first meeting of the Club since influenza became epidemic and was very enjoyable. Mrs. R. W. Martin held the high score for the afternoon.

VALUABLE MINERALS IN NO MAN'S LAND

Riches Reported to Be Contained in Hills Near Old Camp of Crescent.

The strip of country lying along the state line between California and Nevada, near Crescent, but which, owing to the peculiarities of the survey seems to be in neither state, and is therefore called by prospectors "No Man's Land," has been brought to public notice through the recent operations of H. M. Benson.

Mr. Benson reports that he has made a mineral discovery of vast importance. He reports that a section of that country practically two by three miles in extent is practically seamed with large lenses of feldspar and nitro-calcite, which minerals have been found to contain potash and nitrogen, and uranium and radium in quantities that promises to supply the world's demand for these minerals. Mr. Benson claims that no other find in the mineral world can equal the possibilities presented by this find, and he states that the discovery of these two coveted and rare minerals can be accepted as true.

Heretofore, it is said, the ore of uranium has been found in this country only in Colorado and in limited amounts. Uranium is now declared to be the coming mineral required in the world's mechanical industries, and the mystic mineral radium is derived from uranium and its uses to science are unlimited.

Feldspar has become valuable to the steel makers to replace imports once made from Russia. With whole mountains to be moved, Mr. Benson predicts that a flourishing mining camp will arise on the boundary line between the two states.

In the window of Rockwell's Electric Shop is a German helmet picked up by Floyd Rockwell on the famous Argonne Forest battlefield in France. This is the first souvenir of the kind to reach Vegas so far as we know. Floyd is a member of the 346th Machine Gun Battalion and was a part of the 91st division during its terrific campaign in the Argonne region.
