A Republican Year

THE INTEREST and enthusiasm displayed by the large number of delegates attending the Republican State Convention at Reno Tuesday indicates that there is a preponderance of Republican sentiment in the state. Delegates from every walk of life in all parts of the state took the time and trouble to go to Reno and participate in the party councils. Especially notable was the demonstration of approval of our Republican Senator Oddie, Congressman Arantz and Governor Balzar. The enthusiasm with which they were elected by acclamation as delegates to the National Convention was a compliment well deserved. To all appearances 1928 will prove an overwhelmingly Republican year in Nevada.

Nevada Behind Hoover

NEVADA'S NINE VOTES at the Republican National Convention at Kansas City June 12, will go to Herbert Hoover. Republican leaders as well as the rank and file of the party recognize Hoover as the logical candidate and by far the strongest. It was the opinion of a majority of the convention that it would not be wise to send the Nevada delegates instructed but this did not in any sense indicate opposition to Hoover. The nine Nevada delegates will vote as a unit and only should it become apparent that Hoover cannot be nominated will they throw their force to another. Recent reports of primaries in eastern states show that the nomination of Hoover by an early ballot is assured.

Moonlight and Roses

LAS VEGAS WILL some day be a veritable rose garden. Nowhere does the rose develop more of queenly beauty than right here in Vegas and many of our gardens are now filled with fine blooms, and as time goes on rose growing will be a favorite pastime in our home gardens. And did you ever see a more brilliant moon surrounded by a more great and glorious halo than that of Thursday evening? When it comes to moonlight and roses Vegas has both in perfection.

To Pave--or Not to Pave

THE PAVING PROGRAM seems to have more complications, ruts and holes than some of our Vegas streets. For months we have talked and hoped and hoped and talked about the possibility of improving our streets and saving, our citizens the distress of another summer of smothering dust. The City Commissioners and City Attorney have given considerable study to the problem without arriving at any definite policy, but some annoying and unexpected complications have been brought to light. Whether, under the present law, public property can be assessed as part of a street improvement district, is one problem. Whether the city funds will be sufficient to take care of the necessary payments which the city must obligate itself for is a most important question.

Among property owners there seems to be a pretty general approval of the street improvement program. It is apparent that the payments spread over a period of ten years will be a burden so light as to be more than justified by the increased values and greater comfort and convenience. In considering the matter we should not consider ourselves alone, but, also, the effect that a dirty city and clouds of dust have on the many people constantly coming to give us the once over. With a little more civic pride manifested in the appearance of our streets, a much larger proportion of our callers will decide to remain with us.

If the city board, after the careful consideration it has given the subject, believes that we are in shape to carry out a street improvement program this summer and if the legal obstacles which our much amended city charter seems still to contain can be surmounted, we should hasten the work. Of course, if it can't be done, we should abandon the idea and devote our energies to something else.

How Youth Studies

The average, or even somewhat better than average, male student's behavior when at work on a thesis is something like this: A leisurely stroll to the library, a chat with the girl at the reserve desk, an apologetic request for a philosophy book, a few minutes spent in settling down in the most comfortable position possible in a library chair, the counting of the pages in a chapter, a half-hearted effort to read three or four pages, a yawn—and then for the remainder of the afternoon a semi-whispered conversation with the girl in the nearest chair.—From the Bookman.
