MRS. MYERS' DEATH DUE TO ACCIDENT

A coroner's jury yesterday declared that Mrs. Emma R. Myers' death was not due to an intentional act but rather that she had fallen from the speeding car which was being driven by her husband, Dr. R. R. Myers.

The jury reported in their findings that Mrs. Myers had apparently become stifled with the warmth of the car and had attempted to open the window. Taking hold of the wrong lever the door of the machine was thrown open by the weight of her body, hurling her onto the pavement.

The jurors were aided in their verdict by the testimony of Dr. Forest R. Mildren who attended the victim following the accident. His testimony showed that certain marks on the body resulting with her impact with the ground proved that Mrs. Myers had tried to prevent death by reaching out her hands to break the fall.
