He believed in giving his readers that which much used for giving a "floral" would interest them, and accord- fragrance to bouquets, washes, and ingly many amusing stories were other preparations of the perfumthe outcome of his earlier efforts er. as a reporter. Wiliams told of one incident, that of a man who killed his wife at Empire, a small town between Virginia City and Carson City, which did not happen. The story of the tragedy was carried by the Associated Press and "Mark Twain was roasted to a finish."

Williams himself, while a young man running a newspaper at Genoa, became acquainted with these earlier Nevada editors who were associated with Twain. One of these was Af Doten, whose son is now a ranking professor on the University of Nevada staff.

Other Old-Timers

At this point Williams told of later Nevada newspaper men who welcome. reward. Among them were: Harry Mighes, "one of the finest writers we had in the early days and father of Hal Mighels, formerly editor of the Fallon Standard and nov eidtor of the Carson City Appeal. Harry Mighels was the early edito of the Appeal. After his death he was followed by Sam Davis, another well-known Nevada newspaper man, who carried Mighel's
