

FARM RELIEF BILL PASSED BY SENATE

President Hoover Carries Bill to Victory After Bitter and Prolonged Fight in Senate.

House Cheers Passage Signature of President to be Affixed to Bill on Monday Announcement of Board Members Expected Soon.

WASHINGTON, June 14. (U.P.)—The senate ratified the farm relief agreement today and the bill was ordered enrolled immediately to permit its being sent to the White House before President Hoover leaves the executive offices for the day. The vote was 73 to 8.

The senate held up the measure for debate during most of the afternoon while Democrats and independents protested it would not accomplish the desired results. Most of them, however, said they would vote for it.

The house was kept in session while the senate debate continued. Speaker Longworth desired to wait until the senate passed the bill so he could sign it in the presence of the house and expedite its dispatch to the White House.

The house today agreed to the conference report on the administration's $500,000,000 farm relief bill. Less than two minutes was used to push the measure through. Chairman Haysen of the agricultural committee moved to take "House Bill No. 1" from the speaker's table and agree to the conference report which eliminated the debenture plan which the senate had been insisting upon.

Majority Leader Wilson explained it was unnecessary to read the report of the house as it had been reported before, so this formality was dispensed with.

Speaker Longworth then announced the conference report had been considered as read the third time, agreed to and passed. Not a single voice was raised either for or against it.

The bill was sent immediately to the senate for its consideration. It waited there but 10 minutes and then was taken up by the senate upon motion of Chairman McNary with prospects that debate would be shortened so it could be sent to the White House before President Hoover leaves his office for the day. He is expected to sign it immediately and there is a chance he may announce tomorrow the personnel of the eight members of the federal farm board which is to take over agricultural supervision and administer a $500,000,000 federal revolving fund under provisions of the bill.

All known speed limits for legislation were smashed by the action of congress. In all the history known to the oldest congressional employee, no major item of legislation has received such swift consideration.

Just before the bill was taken up in the senate, Senator Steak, democrat of Iowa, read into the record a protest from the corn belt committee purporting to represent 1,000,000 farmers, and stating the bill in its final form "does not manifest the slightest effort to handle the all-important surplus question, which is the root of the farmers' ills."

The farm bill delayed action temporarily on the pending senate amendment to abolish secret sessions, and the Borah resolution seeking to instruct the senate finance committee to confine tariff revision to rates on farm products alone.

Applause greeted Speaker Longworth's announcement to the house that the senate had passed the bill. Longworth signed it at 3:55 p. m. and returned it to the senate for Vice President Curtis' signature.

The bill will not, however, go to the White House until Monday because the senate recessed over the week-end. The bill must be signed by Vice President Curtis in open session after it is engrossed on sheepskin and this cannot be done until Monday.

Two Men Get Jail Terms for Playing of Practical Joke

MADISON, Wis., June 14. (U.P.)—Pardon for a practical joke which cost them three years in prison is sought today from Gov. Walter J. Kohler by Francis Dolan and Harry Fuller, Vernon county farmers.

Returning from a party where moonshine had flowed freely several months ago, the two men stopped at a friend's home and, finding his family absent, moved the furniture from the house into the nearby fields and orchards. The dining room table, adorned with the carcass of a skunk, was located in a grove of trees some distance away.

Despite the courts' instructions that the men were not guilty of burglary if they were not intent on crime but merely were participating in a drunken frolic, a jury convicted them.

Police on Lookout For Tallman Car

LOS ANGELES, June 14. (U.P.)—The week-old search for the elusive William Loren Tallman, accused murderer of Mrs. Virginia Patty, today still was without a substantial clew as to his whereabouts.

Police in various Pacific Coast cities, engaged in running down every lead, found only mistaken identifications at the end of each trail.

Local headquarters, believing that the suspected brick slayer may have recovered his automobile and fled inland in it, broadcast a description of the machine.

Officials in all cities were asked to watch for a 1923 Ford roadster with the license 6-G-1093.

Searchlight Man's Wife Is Shot Mysteriously

SAN BERNARDINO, June 14. (U.P.)—Mrs. Reeda Taylor, 19, bride of Jack Taylor, said to be with a surviving crew near Searchlight, Nevada, was near death from bullet wounds today while police attempted to solve a mysterious shooting at the home of her mother here.

Two men who gave the names of Buck and Bill Elliott, were arrested near the residence after neighbors heard two shots.

According to police, the men said they had attended a gay party at the house and were on the front lawn when the shots were fired. They declared they ran back and found the girl on the floor.

Mrs. Taylor suffered two serious wounds. Because of her condition authorities were not able to question her.

Kip Enjoys Browsing 'Round Points of Interest in New Home State

Trips which Kip Rhinelandler has made to Carrara, the Boulder Dam site and other points of interest around Las Vegas have been the merest part of the young man's program of becoming a genuine citizen of Las Vegas, but they serve to show the interest he has taken in the country into which he has come and in which he intends to remain, it was explained yesterday by Harmon and Salter, attorneys for the young man who has lived here for months under the name of Lou Russell, his true identity kept faithfully secret by the few business men and friends who knew who he was.

Choosing not to dwell upon the widely discussed likelihood of his filing suit here for a divorce from his octoroh wife, and the probability that she will come here from New York to fight it, the lawyers especially telling of a trip Rhinelandler took to Carrara, where he got his first look at gold mining operations as they are carried on in this state.

Meets Mining Characters He met F. Ray Boggs, president of the Gold Ace company and of the Nevada Airlines Inc., and noted mining men such as Briz Putnam, Jim Shea and Pat McLaughlin, by none of whom his identity was not in the least suspected.

Rhinelandler got an immense "kick" out of his look into the inner workings of a Nevada boom camp and mine, and picked up samples of high grade to take with him as keepsakes. He confessed a fascination not only with the mining and the activities he has seen in Nevada, but with the silent desert, and the beauties of the mountain environment in which he has spent so much of his time since he came here in February to avoid harassment by newspapermen and photographers.

The young man has had many trips to the dam site, and to points of interest around Clark county, all of which were made with his identity unknown, except to a few. Charlie Ross, of the Nevada hotel, who had seen Rhinelandler several times in New York, and who consequently knew him here since February, faithfully kept the secret for him, as did Mrs. John F. Miller, who also recognized him, and many others, according to Harmon.

"Kip is really a likeable chap," said Harmon, "and Las Vegas no doubt is going to be proud to have him as a citizen."

Yellow Bird Has Eventful Trip

SANTANDER, Spain, June 14. (U.P.)—The French monoplane Yellow Bird completed the seventh north-south airplane crossing of the north Atlantic from west to east when it landed on the beach at Comillas, 25 miles west of here on the Bay of Biscay, at 9:30 o'clock tonight (3:30 p. m. eastern standard time.)

Four men made the flight. They were the plane's crew of three, Jean Assolant, Rene Lefevre, and Armeno Lotti, and a stowaway, Arthur Schreiber of Portland, Maine. The flight from Old Orchard, Maine, which the fliers left at 9:10 eastern standard time on Thursday, was made in 30 hours and 20 minutes.

Assolant made an easy landing. The gathering darkness compelled him to land to avoid a smashup in a forced landing later.

The four men decided to spend the night at Santander and continue to Paris, their destination, tomorrow.

Their great adventure was ended by a shortage of fuel. Head winds encountered over the Atlantic had exhausted their supply as they neared the coast of Portugal. Assolant was determined to go on to Paris and continued along the shore line of the Bay of Biscay after reaching the continent, hoping to go as far as possible before landing.

Assolant had hoped to follow the coast as far as Bordeaux, but when his fuel gave out, he made a safe landing on the beach at Comillas shortly after dark.

The fliers were only 450 miles down. The tanks contained almost from Paris when they were forced to gasoline. They did not dare attempt to make the short flight across the Bay of Biscay to the Basque country in France.

New Plane for Rise at Angle

Experiments at Milwaukee Would Adopt Helicopter Principle; Would Use Two Propellers.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 14. (U.P.)—An airplane employing two propellers, of the helicopter and yet radically different from most vertical lifting contrivances, is under construction here.

The device, admittedly purely an experiment, will be equipped with two propellers, devoted entirely to the job of raising the plane, in addition to the usual screw type propeller at the nose of the craft.

The vertical lifting blades will be driven by a Hispano-Suiza motor in the fuselage through an arrangement of bevelled gears.

A tryout of the strange flying machine will be conducted in July by Jess C. Johnson of Delray Beach, Fla., its inventor. The machine is being constructed by the Hamilton Metalplane Co., here.

Johnson's plane, if it is a success, will not rise vertically but will enable takeoff at approximately a 45 degree angle with all three propellers spinning. Landing also could be accomplished more abruptly than is possible with an ordinary type machine.

Structure to Be Erected at Main and Fremont Has Backing of Business Men, Unions, to be Begun Today

Construction will begin today on the big illuminated welcome sign to be erected at Main and Fremont for the arrival of Doctor Mead, according to E. Roland Brauch, of the electricians, who was appointed by Mayor Hesse to get pledges and collect money for the materials.

James F. Brower, engineer for J. F. Hesse, worked out all the details for the construction of the arch and gateway and Harvey Wilson will be in charge of the actual construction work.

The pouring of cement for the two pillar foundations will be started immediately, according to Brauch, who stated they will weigh one and a third tons each, being four feet square, and being rooted a foot below the surface. The pillars will be twenty feet high, the span will be 52 feet 4 inches, and the gates, which will be fastened ajar, will be 12 feet high and 7 1/2 feet wide each. There will be 18 1/2 feet clearance in the middle.

Contributions have reached $229.50 and are still coming in. "That leaves about $150 more which we need," said Brauch yesterday. "And I am sure we'll have that before long, judging by the response we've had so far."

Rotary Meeting Pleasing Event

The regular meeting of the Las Vegas Rotary Club Thursday afternoon was a pleasing one for several reasons.

The program, in charge of Cy Wengart, program chairman for the day, was short, allowing adjournment before the usual hour, and at the same time it was full of zip.

Persons desiring to make contributions and who are not called upon by Brauch may leave their contributions at the office of The Age, Brauch stated.

Should there be a surplus after the arch is erected, that will go to the maintenance of the arch as long as possible after the reception, or its renovation or remodeling at a later date by the Chamber of Commerce, if that organization decides to take over this responsibility, according to Brauch, organizer of the scheme for the erection of the arch.

A SAD CASE By Edgar A. Guest I'm sorry for my banker. If his dreadful plight I'd know, I never should have called on him to ask him for a loan; He greeted me most kindly and I thought my chances good. When I asked him for assistance, but he sighed: "I wish I could."

His pleasant face turned solemn and his eyes filled with tears. His voice seemed strangely plaintive as it fell upon my ears; He started in to tell me of the many loans he'd made. And he sobbed upon my shoulder "They will never be repaid."

"My boy," he slowly whispered, and I shuddered at his groans. "I've done nothing all this morning but deny requests for loans." Then his tears upon the carpet fell like raindrops on a lake. And I begged him to excuse me, for I thought his heart would break.

"I'm a man in need," I told him, "but I'm tender-hearted too. And it hurts me to consider that I've brought such grief to you. Dry those tears and cease that sobbing. As a friend I wish to rank. Should I raise that money elsewhere I will lend it to your bank."

President Ferguson announced that Otis Smith would have the program for next week.

COLORADO RIVER MEET ADJOURNS WITH HOPE FOR PACT PERSISTING

Delegates Leave Conference at Washington to Consider Chairman Donovan's New Water-Division Proposal With the Home Folks; Will Reconvene in October.

WASHINGTON, June 14. (U.P.)—Bearing with them a form of agreement to serve as the basis of future negotiations in the west, the Colorado River commissions from California, Arizona and Nevada, recessed today and departed for their respective homes. They held sessions here for 16 days.

Col. William J. Donovan, government referee, submitted to the delegates a formula which he asked them to consider again when the conference was resumed at Santa Fe, N. M., in October.

Submission of the formula came after more than 48 hours of private conferences between Donovan and the various state delegations. Chairman John L. Bacon of California said he regarded it as a foundation on which future negotiations might be based.

"I feel that the present conference has accomplished more than any of the previous ones," he said. "At least, we have a foundation on which to build a structure. At the end of previous conferences, we did not have even an excavation."

Chairman Charles B. Ward of Arizona would say only that he considered the formula "a possibility for an approach to the problem at a later conference."

Nevada's commissioner, George W. Malone, was more optimistic about the possibility of a future compact than any of the other representatives.

"I predict," Malone said, "an agreement will be reached within six or eight months and the entire Boulder Dam project will go through according to schedule."

Shortly before adjournment, Malone asked permission to submit to the secretaries of the interior some questions directed to clarify the question of division of power to be generated at Boulder Dam, Arizona commissioners objected, contending such matters were subject to the interpretation of the interested states rather than of the secretary of the interior. Malone asked to submit the questions informally as an individual.

The full text of the Donovan proposal is as follows: 1—That the Gila River shall go to Arizona. 2—Arizona may use any of the now unused waters of her tributaries other than the Gila, releasing therefore equivalent water from the main stream waters.

3—That of the 7,500,000 acre feet of water in the main stream apportioned to the lower basin by paragraph (A) of article III of the Colorado River Compact, 300,000 acre feet will be apportioned to Nevada. 4—That of the 7,200,000 acre feet remaining, and of the 1,000,000 acre feet provided for in paragraph (B) of article III of the Colorado River Compact, Arizona and California each shall receive such percentages as shall be deemed fair and equitable.

5—That the additional available water in the lower basin shall be divided equally between Arizona and California. 6—The Mexican burden shall be borne equally by California and Arizona.

Possession of the Gateway hotel premises, on North Main street is the question to be settled by a suit filed this week by D. H. Johnson against Marion Wilson Gateway Hotel company, Inc., Lucille Henning and W. E. Sanders.

According to the complaint Marion Wilson leased to C. H. Miller and D. H. Johnston lots one to seven inclusive, block one of Las Vegas townsite, on a ten year lease at $75 a month beginning November 10, 1926.

Agreed to finish the second and third floors of the hotel, and install a heating plant by November 10, 1926. The charge alleges this was not done.

On December 6, 1927, C. H. Fuller assigned to the plaintiff all interest in the lease and on April 19, 1928, the plaintiff demanded possession, alleging $8,800 damages in rents and profits lost between November 19, 1926 and April 19, 1928. This amount plus sundry other amounts are demanded by D. H. Johnston in this action, which was filed by Roger Foley, attorney.

Bakery Goes On Despite Fire

In spite of the damage done the Nevada Bakery in the fire which raged there for awhile around midnight last Wednesday, the bakery will continue in business straight through until repairs of the shop are completed, it was stated yesterday by B. H. Johnson, proprietor.

The bakery will get fresh baked goods elsewhere and continue to do business, the refinishing and cleaning up of the bakeshop to be completed early next week, it was stated. The machinery was damaged very little, and things will get moving again soon, he said.

The insurance adjuster is said to have left Reno Thursday, and was expected here yesterday at latest, after which time repair of the damage was to go ahead.

The Clauson and Tucker barber shop next door, the only place closed up temporarily and will not be able to do business until the cleanup is complete.
