This Rattlesnake Made His Mark Before He Died

C. O. Rennert, cattle mountain rancher, killed his rattlesnake, but was bitten while he was doing it.

Tuesday afternoon he stopped his Buick sport roadster on the road between Pioche and Ely and attempted to snap the snake's head off with a riding whip.

He got too close, according to the story brought to the Age by Fred Brown, of Los Angeles, who saw Rennert shortly after the incident, and the rattler struck, getting him at the base of the thumb, on his palm. He killed the reptile.

When Rennert's sister, who was with him, hailed Brown, who was driving by on his way to Los Angeles, Rennert had lashed the palm with a knife, washed the poison and bathed it with an emergency preparation he had had in the car.

The snake had 14 rattles, and Brown, Rennert had just come from Salt Lake, where he had gone to see his wife.

Range and Grass Fire Controlled

RED BLUFF, Cal., June 26, (AP)—A range and grass fire that swept over more than 25,000 acres and for a time threatened this city was under control today.

10,000 Are to See "Heavy" Bout

By GEORGE KIRKSEY United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK, June 26, (AP)—A fight will happen when Max Baucus's mighty fist connects with Paulina Uscudnik's iron chin.

Yankee Stadium tomorrow night. The question gripped the attention of boxing fans throughout the world today.

Reaching the highest level of interest manifested in any boxing fight since the second Dempsey-Johnny beat at Chicago in 1927, tomorrow night's 15-round heavy-weight match promised to attract a crowd of more than 60,000, and receipts in excess of $500,000.

Unless the bout turns out to be a rude disappointment, the winner could figure prominently in the election of Gene Tunney's successor. Present plans call for the fight to meet Jack Sharkey in September, or perhaps Jack Dempsey if the former champion elects to fight again.

Many see in Schmeling the future champion. The German has a reputation in his prime, paragon of which is his faculty for leaping into the kill.

Schmeling demonstrated his ring versatility and punching power against Johnny Risko, Barcelona, in his ability to take it to the Black Uhlans of the Rhine, which is his faculty for leaping into the kill.

One of the main concerns of Schmeling's boosters is whether he can stand up against punishment. He has three knockouts recorded against him—two when he was a youngster in 1924 and 1925 and a second knock-out at the hands of Tom Daniels, a second rate Canadian, on February 25 last year.

If Schmeling can't take it, this fight is almost certain to prove a fact. Paulino is more of a slugger than a knocker-out, but if Schmeling can stand up under the instant, never-wavering attack of a Basque, there will be few who will question the German's ability.

Betting odds today were 6 to 5, take your pick. Those who laid their choice were required to pay the 6.

Safety in Canning

Orpha A. Miller, district extension agent, hopes to have all the women and those interested in canning, fully instructed in the best and safest methods.

In a bulletin recently sent out she quotes the following from the Official Record, a publication of the United States Department of Agriculture of June 6, 1929: Dr. A. E. Woods, director of scientific work, is authority for the article.

"Research and practical experience have demonstrated that non-acid food products—for example, asparagus, beans, corn, peas, beans, spinach, meats, and fish—can not be safely canned by processing in boiling water but must be sterilized under pressure and under definite conditions of time and temperature. Pressure cookers are now standard equipment and are readily available at small cost. The department does not recommend any particular make, although it is important that the pressure kettle be equipped with thermometer and pressure gauge for proper control.

There is now no excuse for continuing to take risks involved in canning nonacid foods without adequate pressure cooking.

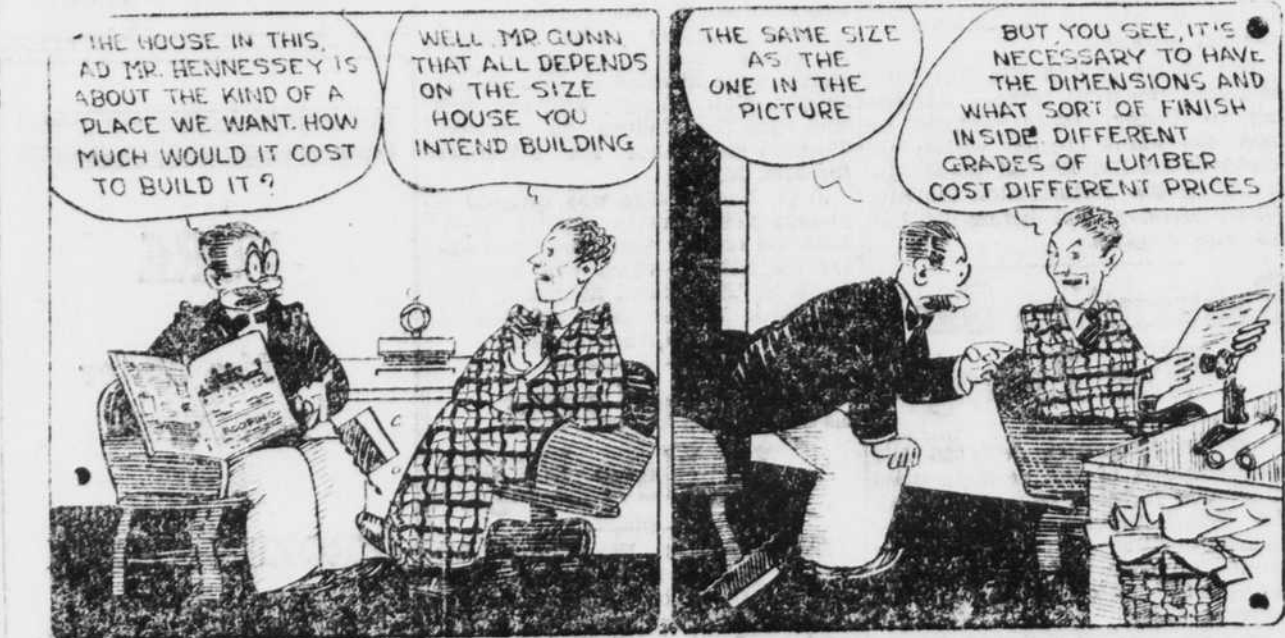

"All recommendations made by this department will hereafter make this clear and emphatic."
