By Williams Railway Offers Special L.A. Rate for Month

September 15 Fare On U. P. Will Be $7.60 Instead of $12.00.

From Las Vegas to Los Angeles

for $7.60! That is the special rate being offered by the Union Pacific for one month between August 15 and September 15, it was announced here recently by B. M. Prescott, traveling agent for the traffic department of the railway.

This is the lowest fare ever allowed between these two points, according to Prescott, and it is the first time such a reduction has been tried here, making the fare cheaper than any other regular mode of travel, it is said.

Low one way fares to many points in the East and South also will be offered, tickets for such to be on sale in all Nevada stations.

These special rates, it is explained, are good only in chair cars and coaches-not in sleeping cars. One hundred pounds of baggage may be carried free on this special. it was pointed out. The regular rate between Las Vegas and Los Angeles is $12.15. The residents of either city can spend a full day in the other with loss of only a day, by making the trip both ways at night, it was shown. Trains leave Las Vegas at 9:15 p. m. and arrive in Los Angeles at 8::30 the next morning. They leave Los Angeles at 7::30 p. m., arriving here at 6:05 a.m.

Eskimo Sees Miracles In Electricity

Pavoo Poliak, who lives near Aklavik in the Arctic Circle, is the man of the hour in Eskimoland. For Pavoo works miracles. He pushes a button and the moon comes into the the room. He pushes a button again, and the moon it goes away

Thus the miracle of the electric light, so much an everyday thing to us in more temperate climes, becomes an object of never-ceasing wonder to the Eskimo "children of twilight" who live within a range of 500 miles or so of that little black speck on the Arctic whiteness that is the Poliak cabin. The annual report of Supt. James Ritchie, commanding the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in northern Alberta and western portions of the Northwest Territories, brings first news to the world of Pavoo and the miracle of the little white bulb on his cabin ceiling that suddenly becomes brighter than the moon when a button clicks on the wall Supt. Ritchie's report, recently made public at Ottawa, gives these details:

Poliak visited the Anglician mis- street. sion at Shingle Point and there saw electric lights for the first time. He found the electricity came from an individual electrict plant exactly like that used on more than 325,000 farms in the United States. A hasty inventory of the money he had realized from his season's trapping and fishing showed him he had cash enough to buy just such a system himself.

Loading the electric plant on his sledge Pavoo mushed back to his cabin. Being a mechanically-minded soul, he installed the plant and did the wiring himself. So Pavoo has the double distinction of being the first Eskimo to have an electric lighted house, and of being the first Eskimo electrician as well.

With the plant installed and wiring completed. Pavoo held a great house warming. He invited all his friends from the shores of the Arctic ocean 60 miles northward to a couple hundred miles southward where some more neighbors lived.

They assembled in the dark little Pavoo cabin. Poliak walked proudly to the wall and clicked a switch the room leaped to light and brilliance. Astonished shouts came from the guests, mingled with a quaver of awe. Pavoo had made the moon come right down from the heavens, to rest on the ceiling of his room. The guests almost wore out the switch that night, clicking lights on and off.

Supt. Ritchie's report also pictures other advances of civilization into the Arctic circle. Electricity, the radio, and the airplane are three modern devices to reach the "children of the twilight." Radio, powered by individual electric plants, being used extensively by church missions in the Arctic. And the airplane is being employed to speed up communication with the very post of Aklavik near which Pavoo lives. An airplane line is being started this month from Edmontor to Aklavik, making in about three days a trip that formerly required two months by train and sledge and boat.

Pavoo and his neighbors will soon be accustomed to the hum of the plane overhead. They will soon grow to take radio as a matter of course. The traditional snow ingloc has already been abandoned in favor of the white man's house, the log cabin. As for the Eskimo blubber lamp, it is already going into the discard as a result of Pavoo's pioneering with electricity.

A midsummer bolt of lightning was blamed for the death of Esta Burri, 19, of 204 Joy street, Los Angeles. Miss Burri, employed at the Brockway resort of Lake Tahoe, was swimming when a violent storm arose. A bolt of lightning struck nearby and the young woman died. A coroner's examination disclosed that death was due to heart disease brought on by the sudden shock.
