Quicksand Takes Two Lives in River Swimming Pool

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 16.-(U.P)-A woman and a 6-year-old child are dead today and two other persons are recovering from the shock of fighting against death in quicksand in the Tijuana river in the Mexican border town yesterday.

The woman, Mrs. Victoria Valdez, 43, lost her life when she attempted into the rates of sixteen California to save her son Juan when he public utilities companies cited by screamed for help. The boy was wading in the water with a companion, Leonard Vaidez who was saved by Alfredo Martinez.

Martinez also saved Jose Portillo who had jumped in to save the woman and two children but who became stuck in the quicksand and was rapidly becoming exhausted

Tijuana City officials announced party desk reduced from $3.75 to today the swimming hole is to be condemned.

> Seems funny how, all of a sudden, convicts have started on a rampage in various prisons. In fact it's a riot.

PASADENA. Calif., Aug. 16 .- (U.R) The great sun-spot, expected to cause severe electrical storms this month, has broken up and is rapidly disappearing, according to Dr. Seth B. Nicholson, of the Mt. Wilson observatory staff, who first noticed the almost any of New York's better skyscrapers finds relief from the monotony of his ups and downs by having a few millionaires as daily passengers, and by carrying every now and then a famous actor or a prize fighter.

He may even hope for a Lind bergh once a year.

Automobile Cribbage

Any number of New Yorkers play poker and cribbage with the numbers on automobile license plates. It is a favorite diversion among golfers riding home from their country clubs, along roads where traffic is plentiful but not so thick that they get confused. Each player takes alternate license plates of passing cars, and the stakes range from a nickel to a dollar. Automobile poker is the simple game, but the diversion grows complicated when two cribbage sharks get to wagering on license plates and spend half an hour along a country road muttering "Fifteen-two, fifteen-four, fifteensix and a double run is fourteen."

The Pee-pul's Choice The elite citizenry of Bradley Beach, N. J., a summer colony not far from New York, has induced Willard Huntington Wright to become its chief of police.

Wright, of course, is the S. S Van Dine who made Philo Vance the snootily efficient amateur detective that he is today in all of our big fictional New York murders and Bradley Beachers decided that if he was so smart a dissolver of imaginary crimes he ought to be able to keep the second-story man off their sleeping porches.

But Wright isn't the first New Yorker who has gone to the selec suburbs and gratified a yen for pub lic service. John Held, Jr., is town commissioner of his Connecti cut village when he isn't lampooning the flapper with his brush, and William Hazlett Upson, the author, is superintendent of education up in his most-of-the-time home at Bread Loaf, Vt. The artist colony which goes from New York to Taos, N. M., to spend six to nine months each year virtually officers the village, even though such of its number as Oscar Berninghaus, Ernest Blumenschein Joseph Sharp. Walter Ufer and E. Irving Couse show up often enoug! at the Salmagundi club on lower Fifth avenue to keep their fellow members calling them by their first names.

Art Young, the artist, once ran for the New York state senate on the socialist ticket from a Washington Square district, and it is suspected that Franklin P. Adams would like to be road commissioner in Lyons Plains, Conn.
